PROSPECTS OF PEACE.

An Armistice Asked for by Russia—Italy and Austria Join in the Demand—Reception in Berlin of the United States Dispatches—Thiers Off on a Secret Mission.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Paris is cheered this morning by a rumor that Russia is insisting on an armistice, also that the United States has interposed and sent three decided dispatches to Berlin. [This intelligence was received from the TIMES Paris correspondent on Sunday, and published in the TIMES of yesterday.] It is said the Prussian advance has been stopped in consequence.

THE UNITED STATES DISPATCHES IN BERLIN.

PRAGUE, Sept. 12.—A Berlin telegram to the Politique, of this city, says that a great sensation was created by the dispatch of the American Government to its envoy at the Prussian capital, expressing the hope that there would be a cessation of the war, in view of the fact that its aim, the dethronement of NAPOLEON, had been accomplished. No sooner had the Minister communicated the dispatch to VON THIELE and EULENBORG than it was sent to KING WILLIAM by a special courier.

ITALY, AUSTRIA AND RUSSIA ASK AN ARMISTICE.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 12—4 P. M., via LONDON.—Italy, Austria and Russia are agreed in principle, and have authorized Russia to ask Prussia for an armistice. A dispatch to that effect has been sent by telegraph to Berlin. No answer has yet been received. Lord LYONS, who has heretofore acted as intermediary between France and Prussia, has resigned the task in favor of Señor OLOZAGA, the Spanish Minister.

THIERS ON A SECRET MISSION.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—It is officially announced that M. THIERS will leave here this evening for London, Vienna and St. Petersburg on a secret mission.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The Standard and other British journals urge English intervention in the Franco-Prussian war as a duty and a right, the neglect of which will involve dishonor.

ATTITUDE OF THIS COUNTRY.

The Dispatches Referred To—What Word the Government Has Sent to Berlin—No Actual Interference.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—The report which comes from London that three energetic dispatches have passed through that city for Berlin from this Government, urging an armistice, is an exaggeration of the action of this Government, which has thus far been entirely confined to the dignified, firm and very courteous dispatch, agreed upon on Friday last, when the President was here, and forwarded at once to Mr. BANCROFT at Berlin by Secretary FISH. This Government will only assume the position of mediator upon the joint invitation of the respective Powers, and not in conjunction with the neutral Powers of Europe; and that mediation will doubtless be confined to the exercise of its good offices, and not extended to the responsibility of making a new map of Europe.

To the Associated Press.

It seems, according to telegrams from Europe, that the position of the United States Government is not understood, otherwise it would not be believed in Prague that our Government "has sent a dispatch to the American Minister at Berlin, expressing the hope that there would now be a cessation of the war, in view of the fact that its mission, namely, the dethronement of NAPOLEON, had been accomplished." Nor would it also be believed in and reported from London that "three energetic dispatches have passed through that city from Washington to Berlin, protesting against the further continuation of the war." It is known that the only official dispatch recently sent abroad relating to the war was on Friday, when President GRANT was in Washington, addressed to Minister BANCROFT, but copies of which were also transmitted to Ministers WASHBURNE and MOTLEY to this effect, as ascertained at the time from an altogether reliable source:

"That while we cannot act in connection with other nations, yet, if our good office should be requested by both the belligerents we should be happy to extend them, with a view of bringing about a peace between two great Powers with which we have traditional friendship."

Our Government will scrupulously abstain from interfering with affairs of foreign nations, if for no other reason than because it would set an example and afford a pretext for foreign Governments hereafter to interfere with our own. Hence it expresses no opinion as to the merits of the war. The telegram to Minister BANCROFT was courteously worded, so as not to give any ground for doubt as to our actual position of carefully abstaining from foreign alliances as to the belligerents, while always ready to exercise the offices of friendship when they shall be specifically desired by the nations at war.

PARIS.

The National Guards on the Ramparts and the Forts Fully Manned—Appearance of the Streets—Garibaldi Expected.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—A correspondent writes from Paris, the 10th inst.: "Paris is quiet. There is great activity in the preparations for defense. All the trees in the vicinity are being cut down, and the woods in the surrounding country burned. The National Guards occupy the ramparts, and the forts are fully manned. This looks like a determined resistance. The inhabitants complain at the cutting off of the gas as being likely to cause a thieves' holiday; but this is considered necessary to prevent an explosion. All the bridges around Paris have been blown up. The state of the streets is fearful."

THE SOLDIERY.

Small squads of soldiers who have escaped from Sedan are arriving in Paris. The arming of the populace is going on rapidly, and all are being drilled. One thousand France-tireurs have been sent to join the 4,000 regulars now obstructing the Prussian advance. It is estimated that 200,000 Gardes Mobile are in Paris. The Tuileries gardens are occupied by artillery. Several of the Gardes Mobile belonging to wealthy families, have disappeared. These deserters have been denounced before the military tribunals. Gen. TROCHU has called on them to return to their posts or take the consequences.

APPOINTMENTS—THE NEW ASSEMBLY.

Among the new appointments are those of two young men employed on journals at 300 and 200 francs per month, who have been named Prefects. Political meetings are announced for next week to bring forward candidates for the new Assembly. GIRARDIN goes to the provinces to stimulate resistance.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—GARIBALDI is expected in Paris. The Telegraphic Bureau in Paris has begun to receive private telegraphs for transmission. The Times, this morning, says France has been cured of military dictation. The Paris correspondent of the Times says a stubborn defense of Paris is certain, if the city is besieged. The idea that the Prussians will walk in without difficulty is an entirely mistaken one.

THE ADVANCE.

Severe Fighting Before Toul—The Prussians Constantly Repulsed with Severe Losses—Prussians Repulsed at Montmedy—The Laon Affair—King William's Report.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—The Ministry has just made public the following important intelligence:

The Prussians attacked Toul, on Saturday, at 5 o'clock in the morning, and persisted until 9 in the evening. They were, however, constantly repulsed and many of their batteries dismounted. More than 10,000 Prussians were placed hors de combat. Verdun continues to hold out against the enemy. At Montmédy, on Thursday, the garrison splendidly repulsed a Prussian attack.

PRUSSIANS WITHIN NINE MILES OF PARIS.

The Prussians have surrounded Meaux. They have arrived in force at Crecy, and are approaching Noisy-le-Grand. [The places mentioned here are small villages, suburbs of Paris to the east and north-east. Meaux is twenty-five miles from Paris; Crecy about the same distance, and Noisy-le-Grand only nine miles.]

PARIS, Sept. 12—A. M.—It is stated that Marshal BAZAINE made a successful sortie.

THE LAON AFFAIR.

BERLIN, Sept. 12—4 P. M.—The following dispatch from the King to the Queen has been received, dated 10 o'clock Sunday night:

"The citadel of Laon exploded after its surrender, just as the Prussians were preparing to enter. Three hundred and fifty men were killed, including 200 Mobile Guards. Many were shockingly mutilated. WILLIAM of Mecklenburg was wounded. There must have been treason."

THE ARMY AT A STAND STILL.

LONDON, Sept. 12—Noon.—The Prussian Army has halted twenty-five miles from Paris, at the special request of BISMARCK, to consider the Russian-Austrian proposition for an armistice.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—The successes at Toul and Montmédy, together with the reported halt in the enemy's advance, have led to more activity on the Bourse, and considerable buying on speculative account.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Prisoners Taken at Sedan—McMahon's Defense—His Plans Interfered With by Palikao—The Emperor Treated as the Honored Guest of Prussia.

BERLIN, Sept. 12.—The official report of the capitulation of Sedan states that the total number of prisoners taken is 122,000. The crowd of wounded has been reduced since the reopening of the railways; and all the dead in the fields around the city have been buried.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—It is asserted that MCMAHON wished to retreat from Sedan to Paris, but was prevented by PALIKAO's orders. He will justify himself to the public when he has recovered from his wounds. Four Generals, one Colonel and five commandants have been sent to a German fortress for refusing to sign the capitulation at Sedan.

THE EMPEROR.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The Prussian authorities surrounded the Emperor's journey to Wilhelmshöhe with exquisite delicacy of care and provision for the dignity and feelings of the prisoner. Advices from Cassel say that nothing in the magnificent treatment of NAPOLEON would denote that he is regarded as a prisoner. He seems rather the honored guest of Prussia. Gens. DOUAY and LEBRUN attend the Emperor at Wilhelmshöhe.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 12.—The Empress EUGENIE, while on her way to England, remained concealed three days in the environs of this city.

ATTEMPT TO COMMUNICATE WITH METZ.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—It is reported that 500,000 francs have been offered for a messenger who will succeed in communicating with the commander of Metz. One man who undertook the service has been shot by the Prussians.

Postponement of the Departure of Government Officers for Tours—Fortification of French Cities—Movements of Iron-clads.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Dispatches just received here from Paris state that the departure of certain members of the French Government for Tours has been indefinitely postponed. The Paris Gaulois also states that the diplomatic body have postponed their departure.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—The supreme tribunals of law have removed to Tours, where they are now in session.

CITIES TO BE FORTIFIED.

LONDON, Sept. 12, P. M.—Orders have been issued by the Government at Paris for the fortification of Havre, Marseilles, Dunkirk and other ports. The quotas of men of the large French war steamers are to be filled to the utmost, and the vessels held ready to weigh anchor at a moment's notice.

QUEER RUMORS.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Among the rumors from Paris is one that a large deposit of needle-guns has been found in the city; and another, that a subterranean passage has been discovered extending from the heart of the capital to a point beyond the fortifications.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Six French iron-clads were seen off the Goodwins this morning. Their course was south-west.

PASSAGE OF CORSAIRS THROUGH THE STRAITS.

MARSEILLES, Sept. 12.—ESQUIROS, hearing that two corsairs had passed through the Straits of Gibraltar, has ordered armed preparations to be made here to repel any attack....Twenty thousand volunteers left here yesterday for Paris. ....The Municipal Council has unanimously declared that religious corporations must participate in the national defense.

The Republic and the United States—Minister Washburne Cheered on the Streets—Sympathy in Spain for the New Government.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Mr. WASHBURNE, today, while on the way to the Central Telegraph Office to send a dispatch, was recognized in front of the building by the crowd. Cheers arose, the crowd increased, and the Minister received a most enthusiastic ovation. Mr. WASHBURNE was much moved. This evening the employes of the telegraph companies and many others assembled in front of the American Legation, and made another demonstration in honor of the Government of the United States and its representative.

MADRID, Sept. 12.—Demonstrations of sympathy with the French Republic continue in the northern provinces. Republicans in this city have signed an address demanding the convocation of the Cortes.

A New Prussian Loan—The War Not Anti-Catholic.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Agents have arrived here from Berlin, who, it is anticipated, are seeking to place a Prussian loan on the market.

BERLIN, Sept. 12.—M. DE LEDOCHOWSKI, Archbishop of Gnesen and Posen, has issued a circular denying that the war on the part of Prussia is in any way Anti-Catholic.

Grand German Meeting in Buffalo—Aid for the Wounded.

BUFFALO, Sept. 12.—The German celebration here today, to raise funds for the benefit of the wounded and the widows and orphans in the Fatherland, was a great success. An immense military and civic procession paraded the principal streets, with music and banners, to the public park, where a large concourse of people of all nations assembled to witness the exercises. Orations, poems, singing, and other festivities, occupied the day. In the evening there was a grand illumination and display of fire-works.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12.—The receipts of the German Sanitary Festival, for three nights, have been $20,000.

CITY WAR NEWS.

The French National Subscription.

With a view of giving a new impulse to the French national subscription in aid of the wounded and crippled soldiers of France, the French Committee have called a public meeting of the French residents, to be held at the Apollo Rooms, corner of Broadway and Twenty-eighth-street, on Thursday. A special committee at Dubuque, Iowa, has transmitted, through M. NADER, of that city, a remittance of $141 to the Committee, which had been raised independent of the Société Française d'Assistance Mutuale, of that city, which is very active in the collection of funds. A "Swiss friend" of the French nation, at Atlanta, Ga., has contributed the sole contents to collections of boutique fantaisie by Mlle. OTHYLIE BONISSON, of this City, who is vigorously continuing her patriotic efforts in this direction.

The German War Fund Collections.

The German Patriotic Aid Society at College Point, of which Mr. AD POPPENHUSEN is the President and Mr. C. F. ACKENBACH Treasurer, yesterday transmitted to Mr. SAUER, the Treasurer of the General Relief Fund in this City, $1,000 raised by the Germans at College Point, in addition to $2,172 30 transmitted previously to the Consul-General. These contributions are very liberal, when it is considered that many of the German merchants residing at College Point are also contributing toward the collections in this City. The Committee is composed of Messrs. JOHN BERENS, Dr. F. W. REIMER, HERMAN FUNKE, and H. CASSEL.

The natives of the town of Zweibruecken residing in this City completed their organization at a meeting at No. 157 Fourth-street, when Mr. SCHNEIDER, of the Teutonia, was elected President, and PHILIP CARIO, Vice-President; ANTON WEIDMANN, of the Turnverein, Treasurer, and CARL WENZ, of the Mozart Verein, Secretary. The object of the society is to collect funds in aid of the sanitary corps at Zweibruecken. During the few days that this society has been in existence $325 has been collected.

A German literary association, known under the name of Fortbildungs Verein, has resolved itself into a patriotic aid association for the upper part of the City, and has already collected a considerable sum in aid of the general fund.

From Honesdale, Penn., it is reported that the collections among the Germans there have reached the sum of $447 50, and are progressing. Several hundred dollars have also been collected in the neighboring town of Shelbyville.

Brooklyn German War Contributions.

The German societies of Brooklyn have collected and forwarded $800 to the General Committee of New-York for the aid of the widows and orphans of soldiers killed during the present European war.

THE POSITION OF ENGLAND.

Intervention and Mediation—Perfide Albion—A Sharp Criticism of English Neutrality.

Translated from the Courrier des Etats Unis, Sept. 13.

We attach no more importance than is necessary to the rumors of intervention or of mediation which are now in circulation. Nevertheless, these rumors, whether true or false, are based either on the interests, the logical tendencies or the position of the different European Powers. Thus, for instance, it is certain that for Russia, for Austria, and for the other nations of the Continent, the continued extension of the Prussian influence is both a threat and a danger, while at the same time the excessive weakening of France implies the destruction of a counterpoise which all should feel interested in preserving. It is, then, quite natural that the European Powers should feel inclined to interpose their moral influence at least in order to limit Prussian pretensions, and we are not astonished to find their diplomatic skill engaged in the attempt to moderate for us the consequences of our defeats. * * * In this sense, then, Russia, Austria and Italy are at present the friends of France. England stands in exactly an opposite relation, and she should be—and is—as she always has been, our bitter enemy. And we also see her alone in her position in this our hour of dangers, wishing that those dangers may be increased and seeking to avert the friendly hands which may be extended toward us. It is a proof that she refuses to participate in the attempts at mediation which the other Powers seek to make, but also that she attempts to discourage them by hostile manœuvres. England, in fact, is not over-anxious to see a peace too soon concluded between France and Germany. She must desire a counted struggle, which would so exhaust the belligerent nations as to render them incapable of contesting her maritime and commercial superiority. To speculate on ruins is her political maxim, and the occasion was altogether too propitious to prevent her from founding bright hopes thereon. Speedy peace would then dissipate these illusions, and it would be with a feeling of profound grief that she would regard the possibility of an understanding between France and Germany, which might yet be sincere if the latter proved generous in her terms of peace; an understanding, too, which would not be confined to these two nations, but in which would be also implicated those other nations which might have taken part in effecting it.

Today, then, England is offended at the steps which have been undertaken to shorten the war; and it is not only us whom she wounds by her underhand dealings, demonstrating an implacable perfidy, but she exasperates all Europe and outrages humanity. It is impossible for a nation to long carry such a burden—let us rather say such a crime—without the coming of a day of retribution. England's egotism is proverbial, and no one would regret to see her pay the penalty for it at the proper time; perchance the time is not far distant, and the whole world will rejoice at its arrival. Let the Irish be patient! Nothing can so much aid in making friends for them as this position of their ruler, and, so far as we are concerned, it only serves to increase our sympathy for them. We are glad to give them this assurance on the very day when they make a brilliant demonstration in favor of our country. At their happy meeting we guarantee that the wish will be unanimous for the speedy coming of that day when we can hail their independence, as they today salute our liberty.

Friends—England and France in History—England's Ingratitude—Europe's Obligations to France.

Translated from Le Siècle, Aug. 17.

It is in the time of trouble that we discover our friends. France, which has done so much for civilization, appreciates this truism today. Of those whom she has saved, raised or maintained, not one seems to reflect on the past or on the future. Most assuredly do we believe that our country will rise again. Nations are indestructible, and we do not imagine that our safety is dependent on any one. But even if France were really crushed, we would ask, what would become of Europe? Has the News, which feeds at our expense, forgotten that without our aid the sovereignty of the East would have been transferred to Russia? England alone could hardly have obtained a little slice, and in order to prevent her from meeting with a serious disaster in the Crimea, the assistance of our army and of our fleet was necessary. Nor is that all. What supports England? Her commerce; yet her capital is mingled with ours, and she needs our market much more than we need hers. Our credit is firm. The success of a loan, taken in time of war, without any begging, but by the force of patriotism alone, proves this beyond a doubt. Where will England find as firm financial support as ours, for common operations? Is it in Germany, which has no finances, and never will have? The House of HOHENZOLLERN will leave her stripped and despoiled. All this the organ of the City of London forgets. It forgets also that the navy is not today a power sufficient to insure the safety of a nation. The Saxons have conquered England before this. The thought of humbling English pride might occur to the Germans should they be victorious. Can you imagine the eleven hundred thousand men of the German Armies making a descent on England? What would become of British pride then, and would the Times feel particularly happy in having to fight a million of greedy Germans?

One should never rejoice at the misfortunes of a neighbor. There is a reciprocal liability between nations as well as among individuals. Today it is here, to-morrow there. England was endangered in its Indian Empire before Queen VICTORIA's visit to Cherbourg. Had France not lent her flag to the mutiny of rebellious Indians, where would her Empire there be today? England's greatness is suspended by a single thread—only on the friendship of America, finding an ally in Europe, for example, or on another revolt in the far East. Let the Times be careful how it trifles with the honor of a nation which has been generous enough to forget periodical wars and numberless treasons. We may say as much to the few journals, in countries under obligations to France, which rejoice at her misfortunes. Italy is not yet so firm but that a great success, should we have one, would disturb her considerably. All the ruin she has she owes to us. Let the powerful arm which has sustained her be withdrawn and she has everything to fear from European intrigues. Ancient monarchies have no particular affection for mushroom monarchies, and are continually plosing some evil against them. If the common talk with reference to the nature of Belgian neutrality should be warranted by the facts, it would prove a greater misfortune for Belgium than for us. Only those who know how to compel respect remain strong. The remembrance of 1830 ought never to be forgotten by the Belgians.

Whatever may happen, this is an important time for all the world. Come what will, France will come forth victorious from all her trials. Then will she forget neither friends nor foes. She will seek to strengthen herself—to become invulnerable. One learns wisdom by experience. For fifty years we have been of service to nearly all Europe. We have aided Greece, Belgium and Italy. We have opened to humanity the walled-in world of China. These benefits, unrecognized in the general degeneracy of the Powers, will render us wiser, and the punishment of the ungrateful will spring naturally from our desertion.

BOSTON.

Opening of the Globe Theatre—Mr. Fechter, Mr. J. W. Wallack and Miss Leclercq in "Monte Cristo"—A Brilliant Assemblage and a Finished Performance.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BOSTON, Monday, Sept. 12, 1870.

The Globe Theatre, which has heretofore been known as Selwyn's, was opened to-night for the season of 1870-71, by a superb performance of "Monte Cristo,"—Mr. FECHTER's own adaptation from DUMAS' novel—and before an audience that included a goodly proportion of Boston's beauty and wit and wisdom. The occasion has long been looked forward to by all interested in theatrical affairs with the highest anticipations of pleasure, and it is safe to say that the most sanguine have suffered no disappointment. The attractions were certainly great, the chiefest among them being the first appearance of Mr. FECHTER in a theatre which, as it is given out, he will himself manage for the next three years. The debuts of Mr. J. W. WALLACK and Miss CARLOTTA LECLERCQ, and the rentrée of Mrs. F. S. CHANFRAU, helped to swell the audience to its vast proportions. The Tri-lingual Tragedian, as Mr. FECHTER was rather contemptuously called by some of your New-York critics, has a powerful hold upon the esteem of the play-goers of this city, won by the genius of the actor—not, as envious and uncharitable pens have delighted in repeating, by the unstinted, and, perhaps, injudiciously warm, praise of his friend, Mr. DICKENS. The first part of his engagement at the Boston Theatre last Spring was only a succès d'estime, but when he left us for your French Theatre he had set the town wild over his Ruy Blas and his Claude Melnotte. His reception to-night showed that his popularity has lost nothing since his last appearance. Everybody seemed almost frenzied with delight as the stout, but not ungraceful figure came forward upon the stage; the common restraints that govern public assemblies were quite forgotten in the presence of the great actor, and round upon round of applause greeted his entrée. The ladies were quite as demonstrative as the gentlemen, making their dainty gloves and snowy handkerchiefs do good and cheerful service in joyful and generous recognition. As the play progressed the enthusiasm seemed to increase, and every manifestation of approval and commendation which was possible of expression was showered upon the chief actors in the drama. Mr. WALLACK invested the part of Nourtier with all the daring and dashing qualities that DUMAS gave to the original, appearing, of course, to his best advantage. Miss LECLERCQ, as Mercedes, gave her admirers additional proof of her rare powers as an actress, creating out of very little a character of great interest, and representing it with a sustained power and a delicate finish that was most delightful to witness. Mrs. CHANFRAU's part was not an important one so far as the action of the drama was concerned, but her skill and beauty added materially to the success of the performance.

The setting of the play was truly magnificent. It is doubtful if anything more satisfactory and more effective has ever been seen on the Boston stage than the two scenes representing the Port of Marseilles and the Chateau of If, and their merit was duly recognized and complemented by the audience.

The new act drop, concerning which great expectations had been formed, was a disappointment. It was a draped curtain merely, after the French style and was very tame and uninteresting.

At the end of the fourth act Mr. FECHTER was called before the curtain and greeted with loud cries of "FECHTER!" "FECHTER!" and, in response to the ovation, he said:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I cannot hope, I shall not attempt thus in the middle of a drama, to make a speech. I have not the words at command to express my gratitude for your kindness. I can merely bow my thanks. But I wish to tender my thanks, and I ask you to tender yours to the big-hearted man who has opened his purse so liberally in the interests of art. I name the proprietor, ARTHUR CHENEY.

Mr. CHENEY was hereupon loudly called for, and on his appearance was cordially and heartily applauded, after which the performance proceeded quietly to its close. OAKHAM.

Westchester County Fair—Opening of the New Floral Hall.

The opening of the annual exhibition of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Westchester County, on their grounds, near the village of White Plains, was inaugurated last evening by a grand reception in the new floral hall, just completed at an expense of $8,000. The building is a handsome frame structure 100 feet long by 80 wide, two stories high; the upper one being finished off with a gallery 16 feet wide, running round the entire building. Around the lower floor and galleries substantial tables have been constructed for the display of vegetables, fruits, flowers, &c. In the centre of the main floor a fountain has been erected and will be kept in full play during the Fair. The new hall is brilliantly lighted with gas and presents a cheerful appearance. But a limited quantity of farm produce was sent in for exhibition yesterday, but by this evening it is believed that a good show will be made. In addition to the new Floral Hall a fine building in the French style of architecture has been erected for the officers of the Society. New entrance gates have been erected at the south-western corner of the Fair grounds.

The ball opened about 9 o'clock. The Second Regiment Band discoursed some favorite airs while the crowd was gathering. Dancing was kept up till a late hour.

EUROPEAN MAIL NEWS.

ARRIVAL OF THE TRIPOLI AND CITY OF BROOKLYN.

The mails of the Cunard Steam-ship Tripoli, from Liverpool Aug. 30, and Queenstown Aug. 31, were received in this City from Boston last night. At a late hour, the mails of the City of Brooklyn, from Liverpool Sept. 1, and Queenstown Sept. 2, were reported due. The freshest news from these sources is later by five days than that received by the Java, on Tuesday last.

THE ARMIES.

Von Moltke on the French Troops.

An interesting letter appears in the Salut Public, of Lyons, relative to the instruction which Prussian and French officers are respectively obliged so possess. The writer says: "MOLTKE is supposed to have adopted tactics which are not new; namely, to act above all with his artillery, said to be formidable, and to spare his men as much as possible. NAPOLEON I., of whom Gen. DE MOLTKE is only the pupil, never proceeded otherwise. He it was who first imagined the great concentration of troops by rapid marches. M. DE MOLTKE, his fervent admirer, has always manifested the greatest contempt for our strategy. I remember having heard quoted some of his very words addressed to a French officer on a mission to Berlin: 'Do not talk to your men of military education in Africa. If you have never been there, so much the better; when you become General you will be glad of it. The war you have been carrying on for forty years against the Arabs is a guerillerie of an inferior order. Never any skillful marches, no feints, no counter-marches, rarely any surprises. With that school you will do nothing more than form other schools like it. The first great war will demonstrate your inefficiency, and were I not in the presence of a man of your merit, Sir, I should not hesitate to laugh at your ignorance of the trade to which you devote yourselves. Among you—do not deny it—power is almost a ridiculous person, and in general the working man is one of mean intelligence. Here, on the contrary, the most conscientious studies are in the order of the day, and the lowest Captain knows as much as your staff officers who are so brilliant in the ball-room. Have you even a special smattering of the elements of the military art in leaving your special schools? 'Come now,' continued Gen. DE MOLTKE, taking the other by the hand, 'I wager that you do not know what is the most valuable piece of furniture for the chamber of an officer in garrison. Come with me.' So saying, the General led his interlocutor into a small bed-chamber suited to a Sub-Lieutenant; a small bed without curtains, three straw chairs, shelves of books from the floor to the roof, and in the middle of the room a black wooden board on an easel, the ground strewed with morsels of chalk. 'It is with this that we beat our adversaries every morning,' murmured the old tactician, who was destined to give afterward so severe a lesson to Gen. FROISSARD, the professor of the Prince Imperial. 'And for drawings, here is all we want,' and M. DE MOLTKE exhibited some geographical maps. What a singular conversation, when we think that it took place in March, 1870, for I copy it literally from a letter dated the 21st of that month. What may we not have to say about the lessons to be derived from it? We shall profit by them at a later period."

Composition of the Hosts—Their Manner of Fighting.

From the London Times, Aug. 30.

Something remains to be said of the composition of the rival armies and of their manner of fighting. Man for man, the average French soldier is fully equal to the average German. There are tall, strapping fellows from several districts in both countries—Bradenburgars and Pomeranians on one side, and Normans and Auvergnats on the other. These may be set the one against the other. But with their physical force the equality of the two armies ends. Beyond a doubt the German, and especially the Prussian soldier, is far more intelligent than his French antagonist. Some people have been taught to laugh at the pedantry of Prussian military education. They were a race of book-worms, and the "dash" of the French would tread these worms into the dust. But this nation of book-worms has brought into the field, for the first time, perhaps, in military history, an educated soldier, whose deliberate valor is perfected by the intelligence with which he avails himself, not only of every colpn of vantage in the field, but also of those improved weapons of which only an intelligent soldier can make full use. Thus it has been that, though, perhaps, the Chassepot is a better arm than the needle gun, the French infantry have shown that it is in their hands no better than the weapon of their adversaries. The battle must be long indeed out of which the Prussian soldier will not bring away of his sixty rounds of ball-cartridge. About forty is the most they are ever expected to expend. But in the recent contests the French have, over and over again, fallen short of ammunition at most critical moments, though they carry eighty rounds, the reason being that they fire away their ammunition at absurd distances, while the Prussians are taught to husband it for shorter distances, and never, if possible, to throw it away in random shots. With them, indeed, every bullet may be said to have its billet, and for the accuracy of their aim let those 70,000 French corpses answer which were taken out of their rifle-pits at Metz, all shot through the head. Again, it may be said that the present campaign, so far as it has gone, has avenged the old classical system of warfare against that desultory style of fighting by the frantic efforts of corps d'élite which had sprung up among the French, owing to their Algerian campaigns. The French line has been neglected for these favored bodies, while the German forces are remarkable for great uniformity of efficiency all through the army. They are, therefore, able to act with much greater effect in masses, and their method of warfare is neither desultory nor spasmodic, but regular and overwhelming in its advance, as though the whole army were one great machine acting in perfect order. As for the officers, we are loth to think that the French have degenerated in this respect, but if the stories be true which are told of French officers, high and low, following their regiments, not on foot or on horseback, but in carriages, much in the style of LOUIS XV., we think the discipline of the French army must be sadly defective, and that luxury has invaded their ranks in a deplorable degree. The remainder of the campaign will be watched with something more than interest. The Prussians now stand on the classic ground so well defended by the Great NAPOLEON in 1814, and moistened almost every inch of it with the bravest blood of France. So long as the honor of a nation is safe, nothing is lost; but it is full time that the Government should come to the rescue of the nation, or the nation to the rescue of the Government. Before all things let there be a real Government in France, that the soldiers may know for whom they are fighting. The battle has hitherto gone against France, yet it is not so far on in the day that France may not retrieve her fortunes; but to do this her Generals must show more generalship, her population more determination, and the Emperor more of the energy and ubiquity of his uncle."

PARIS.

Execution of a Spy.

Writing from Paris under date of Aug. 27, the correspondent of the Standard writes: "Prussian blood has been drawn for the first time since the declaration of war within the enceinte of Paris. CHARLES HARTH, found guilty of having visited France for the purpose of spying out its weakness, died the death this morning. His trial took place on Monday, as you will remember, and after a very brief procedure, the court-martial that tried the man condemned him without a single dissentient voice. The Prussians (who, by the way, are accused in the Paris Press today of having hanged a woman at Gorze) will protest, no doubt, against the manner in which their countryman was treated, but military law is short and sharp in its decrees, and his judges were satisfied of HARTH's culpability. If he was guilty, as we are bound to believe, there is no room for protest. He deserved his fate. After his condemnation, in the first instance, he had the privilege of appeal, which was availed of, on his behalf, by his counsel, but the Court of Revision, which considered the case on Thursday, found no reason to reverse the judgment. M. WARNIER, the advocate assigned to the prisoner, appears to have stuck generously by him, and even to have forwarded a petition for mercy to the Empress-Regent. However much it must have cost the Empress to refuse it, as Regent no other course was open to her. Mercy could not be extended to the enemy's spy while the enemy himself was on French soil and French blood was being shed in torrents on the battle-field. Accordingly the order was given that the sentence should be carried out. At 5 this morning HARTH was awakened in his cell in the military prison in the Rue du Cherche Midi by a messenger, who announced to him that his hour had come. He received the news calmly, like a man who had given up all hope, and was expecting it; more than that, like a man who was prepared to meet the worst, with the courage of dogged resignation. M. ROTH DE LISLE, the Protestant pastor of the gaol, was shown into the cell of the doomed man, and remained with him until the cellular van that was to convey him to the scene of his execution drew up with a rumble and a clatter of horses' hoofs at the prison gate. HARTH entered it boldly, and the vehicle drove off through the quiet streets with their early freshness upon them, escorted by twelve mounted gendarmes, armed cap à pie, and making music to the ride of death with their clanking accoutrements. The Ecole Militaire, that huge pile of barracks that will be familiar to those who visited the Exposition of 1867, from its position facing the Champs de Mars, was fixed on as the place of execution. The Polygon of Vincennes is the spot usually designed, but the Ecole Militaire was nearer, and this is no time for the formalities of precedent. Whatever is done to paralyse the invader had better be done quickly. The courtyard of the barracks was occupied by all the troops quartered there in marching order. The battalion of the Grenadiers of the Guard, that serves as depot, was there in line, with fixed bayonets, and detachments of Lancers with their gay pennons, and brown, brawny Cuirassiers, and the Guides—the daintiest of all the French cavalry—in their heavily-embroidered jackets, were there too. A pretty sight for a military man, these flashing arms and helmets and polished cuirasses in the cheerful morning sunshine. How did it strike CHARLES HARTH, for he had been a military man by his own admission, a Lieutenant in the Prussian infantry? When the prisoner stepped from the van and threw a rapid look over the assembled troops, he gave a few nervous twitchings of his head. The clock over the centre gable of the building chimed the quarter to 6. Six precisely was the hour fixed for the shooting. The prisoner had yet fifteen minutes to live. He was led into an angle of the court-yard, where the troop horses are usually tied, and which forms a quiet corner to itself. Here he was placed close to the wall, and in front of a squad of twelve men of the Forty-second Regiment of the line, namely, two Sergeants, four Corporals and half-a-dozen privates. The firing party stood in two ranks, the two sergeants being stationed in the rear. As the prisoner was approached by the turnkeys of the military prison, whose duty it was to tie his hands behind his back, he shrunk back and said, "No! I wish to die like a soldier." But on representations being made to him that there was no exception to the rule, he yielded. His eyes were then bandaged, when he expressed a wish to be allowed to give the word "fire." Adjt. CODORT, who had acted as registrar to the court-martial, came forward and read the sentence amid an impressive silence. At a pause at one of the paragraphs in the document the prisoner, fancying the reading had been finished, cried "Tirez, coquins, et ne me massacrez pas!" "Fire, you rascals, and mind you don't miss!" But the squad did not fire; it was waiting another signal. As the last syllable died away on the Adjutant's lips the officer commanding the firing party drew his sword, the soldiers raised their Chassepots to their shoulder and took aim, the sword was lowered, and a dozen shots went off like one, with a sudden startling detonation. Before the report of the discharge had smitten the straining ears of those who looked on, the prisoner fell forward with an inclination to his right side. Over his left breast, in the region of the heart, his shirt was torn into a jagged hole, where the bullets had entered. As he lay motionless on the ground one of the Sergeants in the rear of the firing party advanced through the little cloud of smoke and discharged his piece into the dead man's brain. Dead man, I say, for HARTH must have died before he reached the ground in his fall. The troops were marched past the body, which was then lifted, limp and warm, and put, dressed as it was, into a coffin, and trotted off to the Cemetery of Mont Parnasse, where it was dropped into a grave which had been opened to receive it, and hastily hidden from view.

The Metropolitan Underworld.

The Paris correspondent of the Daily News writes, under date of Aug. 28, as follows: "You know the stage traps in pantomime time, up which the guards of "The Depraved Demon of Dumbledowndery" comes up, armed cap-à-pie, thirsting for the abduction of maidens and the blood of the innocent. You have seen, too, mysterious men clad as divers or colliers, in huge stiff boots and blue jerseys, emerge from the London pavements, white-faced and mephitic, and have said to yourself placidly, "sewers." Combine these experiences as Count SMORLTORK did "Chinese" and "metaphysics," and you will arrive at something far more practical than he. What think you of the enemy entering a modern city by its subterranean ways; and at a given signal appearing above ground? The chance of the Prussians attempting this in Paris is actually being canvassed, and the few people who have been at the pains to ascertain for themselves, and by nauseous personal experience, what the sewers of a well-drined capital are like, what it is to walk in them and to follow their courses, will admit the possibility of a vast force finding its way below ground to any portion of a city. For example, every street in the City of London has its hidden counterpart below. The sewer map of the engineer to the corporation, Mr. HAYWARD, is as complete in its general outline as a map of the city itself, and beneath all the larger thoroughfares men can walk erect, and in many of them three or four abreast. The subterranean works of Paris are more wonderful still, and are admitted to surpass those of ancient Rome. From the suburb of Asnières to the Place de la Concorde an enormous subway runs, which is sixteen feet and a half high, eighteen feet broad, and more than three miles long. Besides this are below the city three spacious galleries running on each side of the Seine, the whole being provided with air-traps at regular intervals, and lighted with oil-lamps. Descend into either of these, and you find them to be as well built as those beneath the City of London, and with facilities for cleansing them which are extremely suggestive of their value for strategical purposes. The subterranean drains, on galleries, are furnished with iron tramways, along which small carts run, which are pushed by three men and furnished with a drop-plank, which fits exactly into the drain, and pushes the mud before it as it advances. On the turpid waters of the great collector, between Asnières and the Place de la Concorde, a good-sized boat is navigated, and the wildest stories are abroad respecting its possible uses to the enemy. Most of these may be dismissed as idle, but I am in a position to affirm that a careful inspection of these subterranean works has been made, and that Paris is preparing itself, down even to the waters under the earth, for the possible reception of its foe. If gunpowder will blow up iron traps, water will spoil gunpowder, and the sanitary rite known as flushing the sewers would effectually dispose of an intruding force. The catacombs, again, into which seventy different staircases lead, and which extend not merely under the Faubourgs St. Germain, St. Jacques and St. Marcel, but under such impossible buildings as the Palais du Luxembourg and the Pantheon, have had more attention paid them within the last two days than has been the case for years. Their uses under contingencies, which it is inexpedient to name, their size and value as repositories, are all canvassed eagerly, and nothing shows

WAR LETTERS.

THE DEFENSE OF PARIS.

Expulsion of the Germans from the City—A Severe but Necessary Measure—Provisionment of the City—Moving Scenes—The Value of the Fortifications, &c., &c.

From Our Military Correspondent.

PARIS, Monday, Aug. 29, 1870.

The proclamation of Gen. TROCHU against the Prussians now residing in Paris, which has of course been sent to you by cable, is causing the greatest distress among many honorable families, the German workmen here, as in the United States, closely affiliating with the people, having many sympathies in common, and being noted for their skill and good conduct. The ties of friendship and of long residence have firmly united them to the French, and they have connections with the families of Paris, not only by common occupations, but by intermarriages. In time they would probably have become good citizens of France, but they hesitated too long between their moral duty and their dread of the law of conscription. They are now suffering from the consequences of not choosing manfully between the country of their adoption and the country of their birth. I happen to be intimate with a great many families of this nationality who, for some time past have been expressing fears of the probability of this measure, and I know that this order plunges them into great distress. The liens of hundreds of families of Paris will be broken, and the poignancy of the grief caused by forced separation, resulting from the proclamation of Gen. TROCHU, will be increased by the charges of treachery and treason to which each will be respectively exposed. Even if perfectly innocent of any hostile thoughts, they will be suspected by many of those whom they have known and loved, and the knowledge of this fact will give rise to the bitterest thought during this forced exile from the French capital. To give up the little home which they have been years in preparing and adorning, is bad enough, but to give up the ties of kindred and of connexion, as many must do, is heart-rending. There are, connected with the depots of various sorts of the forest of Bondy, more than ten thousand German laborers and skilled workmen. All of these men must leave. While this may seem a very harsh measure, there are many things to justify it. Several restaurateurs have openly gloried in the Prussian successes, and have announced their intention of treating the German troops when they arrive in Paris, while others, forgetting that France has nourished and enriched them, show a marked hostility at this trying hour. In time of war the good have to suffer for the sins or follies of the bad.

THE WAR OFFICE.

It is positively announced this morning that the War Office has not only decided to move, but has really commenced its packing. The bureaus are to be moved to some one of the interior cities. Tours is spoken of, and it may be stated with certainty that one of the chief cities of the region of the Loire will be selected. But the Comte DE PALIKAO will not immediately quit the capital. The wisdom of the movement is evident. New armies are springing up on all sides, and time is all that the French now demand. To organize the new forces requires all of the force and the energy of the War Department, and if it were shut up in Paris, during a long siege, the work of organization would stop. Whether or not the Prussians advance upon this city, there will still be large armies without, and new ones will be organized while Paris is holding out against the enemy. It is not probable that, were it perfectly free to do so, either BAZAINE or MCMAHON would come back to this city. Their business is to operate without, and to do all the harm they can to weaken and retard the enemy, until the new levies of France are ready for active service. To cut the War Office off from these Generals, and from the country, would be to cripple the nation seriously.

FLIGHT OF THE TIMID.

But while the Government officials are packing up to leave, thousands of people are packing their goods for the city. At all hours in the day one now sees wagons ladened with furniture coming in from the country, and followed by the poor peasants who have been thus rudely driven from their homes. People living in the environs of Paris are also seeking safety within its walls, bringing with them all articles which might be carried away by the enemy, or the cherished penates which might be easily destroyed. This exodus from the environs is not confined to the side nearest the enemy, for in all the little villages, from Lonjumeau to St. Denis, the inhabitants have come to regard the Prussian invaders with horror and alarm. Thousands are yet alive who remember the occupation of 1815, and an old woman of Lonjumeau told me, the other day, about the soldiers which were picketed upon her. "The red-coats" said she, meaning the English, "were all well enough, and they paid for what they got; but the Hessians were robbers and thieves." Stories of that occupation have been repeated to the children from that time, and in the environs of Paris the very name of Hessian, or Prussian, carries a feeling of hatred or disgust, very like the feeling which once prevailed in the United States. It is very hard to eradicate the animosities engendered by war. With such feelings slumbering in the heart it requires but little to arouse them, and today we find the hatred for the Germans all the more intense, because there are those alive who can give vivid pictures of German excesses during the last occupation. Hence the people are flying to the city. Many will not be permitted to stay here—few, perhaps, who have no relatives to vouch for their means of subsistence; but they are permitted to bring in their little treasures and to store them for protection. At this moment it is impossible to get transportation enough. A friend of mine living at St. Denis wished to bring his family pictures to the city, and he had to transport them in a handcart, making five trips to carry one ordinary load. Everything in the shape of transportation is taken up by the Government for the purpose of bringing in provisions.

THE PROVISIONMENT OF THE CITY.

This leads me to speak again of the provisionment of the city—a work which has gone on with the greatest rapidity under the direction of M. DUVERNOIS, the young Minister for Commerce. Even if the Prussians do not besiege the city, he will no less deserve well of his countrymen, for he has shown a spirit and an energy worthy of all praise. No sooner was a siege expected than he began to form plans; no sooner was a measure adopted them he sent his agents into the country o "take stock," if not to take immediate measures for the siege. The orders found him prepared, and he has since been deep in the work of provisioning Paris. Day before yesterday, two of his agents, running over Tournan and Meaux, were rapidly filling the order for 150,000 more sheep and fifty thousand beeves. There are now in the city, or in the Bois de Boulogne, some forty thousand beeves lately brought in, which, with those which were previously here, give us a year's supply in ordinary times. Counting the increased number of months when the army is here, and the increased consumption during a time like this, we have a very large supply for three months, and a moderate supply for five or six months. At first, salt provisions were thought of, but it was found impossible to get a sufficient supply in Europe, and, besides, the effect upon the public health was feared. Now there is a certainty about the matter of fresh meat. Yesterday forty thousand head of sheep were brought in, and have been placed for the time in the unfinished buildings of the new college of Rollin, Boulevard Rochechonart. Several speculations have been given as to the amount of wheat, rice and grain now on hand, and, striking a mean between them we get a commissariat supply for four months. Gonna little under the lowest of these calculations we get enough for two months, quite long enough for all practical purposes.

THE FORTIFICATIONS.

As a general thing the population of Paris knows very little about the value of the fortifications which surround them, and, although they have heard the works spoken of, have seen them in their Sunday walks or drives, they have no particular ideas about their strength or their powers of resistance. It is well to the people know the full strength of their protectors, for such knowledge gives confidence and reduces calm. The great wars of the present century have shown how difficult a thing it is to take a regularly fortified town, and experience teaches us that it is no trifling task to take a place like Paris, with a bastioned enciente and towers of masonry, and surrounded by another line of forts upon the most perfect plans. The resistance of a few towns, far less powerful than Paris, will demonstrate this idea, and show us something of the resistance of which Paris is capable. In September, 1810, MASSENA was forced to retire from before Torres-Vedras, with the loss of a quarter of his men. In June, 1811, the English besieged Badajos, an attack was made upon San-Christoval, and the forlorn hope of six hundred left three hundred men in the fosse. The loss in other bodies was very great, and they were forced to retire. The defense of Kosen, or the battle of Auerstadt, in October, 1806, is historical. September, 1813, DAVOUST was shut up in Hamburg, and in November cut off from all communication with France. The population was hostile. The Marshal had only about 40,000, but he fortified the town so well, in a short time, that he held the town all the Winter of 1813-14 against all attacks. The siege of Sebastopol will be remembered. It was only after eleven months, and by the construction of parallel approaches that the Malakoff and Redan could be taken. The Allied armies had no enemy in their rear, no danger to their communications; for if the Russians had had a navy, or could have operated in open country, the town had never fallen. The memoirs of NAPOLEON tell us that he often had the idea of fortifying the heights of Paris, but desisted from fear of disturbing the people, and the great events which came so soon after prevented him from carrying out his plans. He believed that the capital is the centre of the intelligence, the grandeur, the glory of a nation, and that its defense was a matter of necessity. This is something of a feudal idea, perhaps a warrior's idea; but up to this moment we have to acknowledge that there is a vast amount of truth in it. Paris must have owed her safety to her walls more than once; and if, when the Allied armies were here she had only been prepared for a siege, her enemies would have melted away before they were able to strike a blow. And the ancient walls were nothing to the works of today. We have a great many facts in favor of NAPOLEON'S idea. If, in 1805, Vienna had been fortified, the battle of Ulm would not have decided the war. If, in 1806, Berlin had been fortified, the army beaten at Jena might have rallied and held ground until joined by the Russians. If, in 1808, Madrid had been fortified, the French had never dared leave Valladolid and Salamanca behind them, even after the victories of Espenoza and Burgos, to march upon that capital. Citations from history are not wanting to prove the value of fortifications, nor do we lack examples to show the probable power of resistance contained in them. It was NAPOLEON'S idea, also, that fifty thousand Gardes Nationaux and three thousand cannoniers could defend the capital against three hundred thousand; and if that is near the truth, what must be the size of the army required to carry the finest fortifications ever erected, and manned by one hundred and fifty thousand troops? It is never very satisfactory to attempt the solution of a problem with two unknown quantities, but there is something in this question, for us within these works, which gives plausibility to the proximate reckonings upon such data, however absurd it may be in a logical point of view.

THE ARMY.

The French Army is now being increased by a fine body of men belonging to the gendarmerie of the country, and regiments of able-bodied, good-sized fellows are coming and going with the days. These men have been in the army; many of them have been non-commissioned officers, and they wear the medals of good conduct or of campaigns. From the departments occupied by the enemy many of these men have been released, and they are now forming into corps. And a new law has passed here which led to ardent cheers. No measure has given rise to so great an amount of satisfaction among the populations of Batignolles, La Villette or Faubourg du Temple than that which now brings the sergents de ville into active service. The cab-drivers, who are the natural-born enemies of the Police, cannot resist a crook of the elbow and loud guffaws, which might seem meaningless, did not this attack of exhilaration break out at the very moment a sergent de ville is passed. The general feeling is a pleasant one, if not exactly in a Christian temper, and the people are anxious to see if these men, noted for their excessive zeal and brutality against an unarmed crowd, can do as well against an armed enemy. There are about four thousand of these men in Paris who will be put into active service at once.

YOUNG AND ARDENT VOLUNTEERS.

New companies of Franc-Tireurs are noticed daily, and we have several regiments now forming in the city. Any one walking through the courts of the Louvre in the morning, or behind the Pavilion Richelieu, will see companies of these young and ardent volunteers being drilled in skirmish firing by some bronzed and bearded Zouave. In fact, it is hard to tell where there is an open space not used for the purposes of drill. All of these companies of volunteers are provided with the stamp of the Minister for War, it having been a question as to what their status would be if captured by the enemy. It is said that the Prussians shoot all peasants who fire upon soldiers in defense of their homes, and they have hanged a girl who chopped off a Uhlan's fingers. Further, threats were made against the young men who went into these bodies of sharpshooters, and it is to protect them that the seal of the War Office is put upon them. Otherwise they might be regarded as bandits.

FOREIGN LEGIONS.

Several foreign legions are also in process of formation, notably one at Tours. In this city the Poles, Danes and Swedes are raising a battalion. There are many other special projects on hand. M. GAMBETTA is said to have demanded permission to defend Fort Bicetre, and received it; but the last part of the story looks rather doubtful. It is further said that he has ten thousand men enlisted, all constituents of the Left. The whole of this story is doubtful. Some of the papers laugh at the idea, and they say that there is small likelihood of danger in granting such permission. They are a little hard upon the son of JULES SIMON also, who has been trying to get a substitute, and who only failed because there was a difference of 8,000 francs between him and the substitute. M. SIMON thought 20,000 francs too high a price to pay. GUSTAVE AIMARD, the author and journalist, is also forming a corps of eclaireurs, to be called the "Press Corps." To enter, it is necessary to belong to the Paris Press and to furnish your own equipments. Many names are already down on the list. The contingent of 1870 was estimated at 140,000 men, but under the present application of the law, allowing no substitutes or exemptions, except in few instances, the total will rise to 160,000. One by one such items rise to show that France is rich enough in men if she can only have time to organize and arm them.

PARIS NOTES.

The American Ambulance—The Street Procession Headed by American Ladies—How the News Gets Out—Prince Napoleon—The War Correspondents—The Villette Affair.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Monday, August 29, 1870.

The ambulance of the Anglo-American branch of the International Sanitary Commission made a most brilliant exodus from Paris, yesterday (Sunday) afternoon. Immediately after the declaration of war by the Emperor NAPOLEON III., a number of American ladies devoted themselves with unremitting zeal and energy to the work of relieving the wounded of the battle-fields. At first the advances of these ladies were coolly received by the Central French Society holding its headquarters under the Cotton of the LAVALLEY and Mme. la Marechale CANROBERT, at the Palais de l'Industrie. There were so many difficulties to encounter that the idea of a separate organization was very near being renounced. The perseverance of our countrywomen, however, was finally crowned with success, and the ambulance which took its departure yesterday for the battle-fields of the Marne and Meuse was headed triumphantly on its march from the Palais de l'Industrie, along the Champs Elysees, the Rue Royale and the Boulevard, to the Northern Railway Station, by a trio of the most prominent promoters of this benevolent enterprise, each one bearing a national banner—the French flag in the centre, the Stars and Stripes on the right, and the English flag on the left. Although this ambulance was really the best in its appointments—over all that have preceded it—having finer horses, a larger number of surgeons and nurses—in fact, being almost luxurious in all its details, its appearance was not greeted with the enthusiasm it merited. When the cortege emerged from the portal of the Palais de l'Industrie a feeble effort at cheering was attempted by a few Americans, who were in the crowd assembled in the Champs Elysées, but no response arose from the multitude whose brothers were to be relieved by the disinterested exertions of a friendly nation. Although evidently unappreciated by the Parisians, it is impossible to say too much in admiration of the courageous and self-sacrificing spirit of our American ladies. Not satisfied with the part they had already taken in the noble work for the relief of suffering humanity, they did not hesitate to assume the responsibility of it by walking fearlessly in front of the procession along the most public thoroughfares of the capital. The Sunday crowd of the Boulevards follow ed silently but in constantly increasing numbers, and without in the least comprehending a demonstration of the sort, every one asking his neighbor what the combination of the three flags borne by ladies could possibly indicate. The emblem of the International Convention, however, insured respect from every one, even when seen by the side of the British national flag; it is possible that the appearance of the English element was not satisfactory, the London Times having succeeded as thoroughly in stirring up animosity in France as it did in the United States during our war. The French, in fact, do not regard with favor any attempt at mere display at this time, their own ambulances being characterized by the severest simplicity.

HOW NEWS IS RECEIVED.

The Bureau of War News at the Ministry of the Interior, which has up to this time so admirably fulfilled its intentions of conveying enigmatic intelligence to the journalists of Paris, has at last found a formidable rival—one entirely left out of view by M. JULES SIMON and other members of the Republican Party in their adjurations to the present Government to change its present system of secrecy for that of divulging all to the people—one that the Government itself with all its foresight has not provided against—never dreaming that the private correspondence of NAPOLEON III. and EUGENIE, Regent of France, being cut off, a substitute for the indiscretions of the Tuileries would inevitably arise in the boudoirs of the ladies of the great Captains who are gone to the wars, and who, at much risk, must send consoling news of their return, after the manner of the great "Marlbrook." So, I hear this morning that the junction of the armies of MCMAHON and BAZAINE was announced only last night, with tears of patriotic joy, by the Marquise DE BEAUMONT, relative of the Duc DE MAGENTA, (MCMHHON,) to Mme. BOURBAKI, wife of one of the Generals of the Imperial Guard. The wife of Marshal BAZAINE (a young Mexican lady dowered by MAXIMILIAN) is living at Versailles, and has not at all partaken of the panic with which the rural population in the vicinity of Paris has been stricken for the past few days. The Marshal telegraphs to his wife that there is not the slightest danger in her remaining at her present residence.

PRINCE JEROME.

Prince NAPOLEON, (JEROME,) of all the members of the House of BONAPARTE, is the one who inspires the least amount of personal sympathy among the French nation. During the Crimean and Italian wars he so notoriously managed to be absent during all the important engagements that he obtained a most unenviable reputation as a soldier. This reputation he seems resolved to continue to deserve. At this moment, when every Frenchman who has a spark of patriotism or of national honor is seeking to render some service to his country, Prince NAPOLEON is reported as endeavoring to negotiate with Italy to make terms with England and Austria to bring about a peace on condition of preserving the dynasty. Prince NAPOLEON would serve the cause of the dynasty far better by leading an army corps to a victory over the Prussians.

INFLUENCE OF THE REPUBLIC.

The Republic, so long the bête noire which has haunted the troubled sleep of the BONAPARTE family, is showing its irrepressible presence in the dominions of BISMARCK and the King of Prussia. Accounts of republican demonstration in Munich are constantly reported, and it is now asserted that the Prussian Police have discovered a vast plot, having its ramifications throughout the whole extent of the Confederation of the South, in Wirtemberg, Bvaria, and in the Grand Duchy of Baden.

THE PRUSSIAN POLICE SYSTEM.

The Prussian Government is served by the best organized police system in Europe, as has been fairly demonstrated by the well-trained "spies" who have spread themselves throughout all France for years past. The benefits of this admirable system have just been extended to Alsace, which is under the direction of the famous M. STIEBEN, and his Adjutant, who, in addition to his renown as a detective, adds that of a dramatic writer of merit.!

THE CORRESPONDENTS ON THE PRUSSIAN SIDE.

M. BERTHOLD AUERBACH, the romance writer of the "Black Forest," is one of the war correspondents with the Prussian Army. He writes to the Gazette d' Augsburg with the signature A. B. The Prussian correspondents are more fortunate than those on the French side. Mr. VIZITELLY, one of the correspondents of the NEW-YORK TIMES, has not yet been heard from, and great fears are felt for his safety. M. GUSTAVE ISENBERT, of Le Temps, (Paris,) has also disappeared. His journal appeals to the public to aid in finding any trace of him.

THE VILETTI AFFAIR.

The Court-martial engaged in trying the prisoners in the Villette affair held a sitting this morning. Among the men tried were BRIDEAU and ENDES, the latter a writer in the Libre Tinsée They both acknowledged that they had desired to overthrow the Government, and would have done everything in their power to excite the people to proclaim a republic. They protested earnestly against any connivance with the Prussians, swerring that their great aim was to obtain a better form of government, in order to be able to drive the enemy from the country more efficiently.

Two other men, LAGRERAU and MORDACQ, are being heard at this moment. The former was arrested with a large chest of pistols and poniards in his possession; the latter was wounded in the riot at Villette, and, boasted he had killed a policeman. At the time the affair occurred the hardened republican BLANQUI was in Paris, and lodged with ENDES.

The Court will probably remain in session until late to-night.

The Crowe Divorce Case—Application for Alimony.

The Crowe divorce case, the facts in which have already appeared in the TIMES, was up yesterday before Judge JONES, in the Superior Court Special Term, on a motion on behalf of the wife, who is plaintiff, for an allowance of alimony and counsel fee. The only new facts developed, in addition to those already published, was the statement by plaintiff's counsel that the alleged affidavit of the hack-driver had never been sworn to by him. The reply of the plaintiff also denied that the house to which she and her friend had removed in Thirty-second-street, was an infamous house, and, on the contrary, affirmed that it was a respectable boarding-house. Judge JONES took the papers and reserved his decision.

Affairs on the Isthmus—Engagement for Tidings of the War—Departure of Gen. Kilpatrick—Robberies in Panama—Shipping and Miscellaneous News.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ASPINWALL, Colon, Isthmus of Panama, U. S. C., Sunday, Sept. 4, 1870.

Since I wrote last we have had no news from Bogota or the interior of Colombia, and the local news upon the Isthmus is of little or no importance. On the arrival of the Arizona the NEW-YORK TIMES was eagerly sought after by all parties, it being considered the most reliable medium of communication, and I was oblige to dispense my file, right and left, among both Prussians and Frenchmen. There was a grand demonstration made here by the Prussian Consul, Mr. MAAL, and in Panama the excitement was intense. Nothing like it has been known since "the great rebellion." The Henry Chauncey arrived on the morning of the 31st, bringing us one day's later news, which confirmed the verbal reports per Arizona. The cable connecting Jamaica with the United States and Europe was to have been completed on the 24th ult., and we shall probably receive our next news via the Royal Mail steamer to the 4th inst.

Gen. KILPATRICK and family are stopping at the Bethancourt House, and will sail per Arizona, so that you will soon have this eloquent lecturer with you. "The South American Republics" are to be his theme. The General has resigned his important mission as United States Minister to Chili on account of ill health.

Panama is still quiet. H. SCHULEN'S steamer Montijo has arrived from Chiriqui, bringing many members of the State Legislature, which convened at the Cabildo on the 1st inst., in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution.

Hon. PABLO AROSEMENA was elected President; F. J. ICAZA, Vice-President; JOSE ARRAGO, Second Vice-President, and BUENAVENTURA ARPILLA, Secretary of State. The latter presented the message of the President.

On the evening of the 2d inst. Mr. PERRY, the United States Consul here, was robbed of quite a large sum in gold. The Consulate was entered from the second-story balcony while Mr. PERRY had gone to supper. There is a clue to the thief, and the Consul may yet recover his gold. A Mr. JOHNSON, from Chili, while stopping at the Grand Hotel, in Panama, was robbed of $400, gold, and suspicions rest upon the same person suspected in the other case. I withhold the name of the suspected party for the present, but future developments may bring it out.

The United States steamer Mohican is still at Panama awaiting orders, all well on board. There is no United States man-of-war in this port, but I am informed that the American Consul has urgently written to have one sent here, and it is to be hoped that his request will be complied with at an early day. The bark New-York, Capt. GIBBS, with coal from Baltimore, arrived on the 28th ult., and is discharging. There are a number of American-built vessels in port, all under the English flag. When will Congress repeal the law which forbids their returning? they are all anxious to again fly the Stars and Stripes.

Among the passengers from the Isthmus per Arizona are, JAMES BOYD, Esq., proprietor of the Panama Star & Herald, and Mr. S. W. D. JACKSON, agent of the Boston Ice Company.

The weather is very fine and the health of the Isthmus good.

The steam-ship Constitution is two days late, owing to the immense China freight she brought down. The passengers will be dispatched immediately per Arizona, and the Henry Chauncey, which was sent down as an extra steamer, will take the China freight, and probably leave here Tuesday, the 6th. The Arizona also takes a full cargo.

Central American Countries—The Frontier Question in Guatemala—Matters in Honduras—Miscellaneous News from Salvador, Costa Rica and Nicaragua.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Friday, Sept. 9, 1870.

The Panama Railroad Company's steamer, Guatemala, Capt. HOWES, arrived at Panama on the 30th instant, bringing late dates from Central America. The American brig Kelly Coburn, Capt. J. WILSON, and the American schooner Milton Badger, Capt. DODERO, were at Punta Arenas. The former loading with cedar wood for Callao, and the latter with coffee for San Francisco. The following news has been published by the Panama Star & Herald:

GUATEMALA.

From this Republic we have dates to the 14th inst. If we are to judge by the periodicals from this part of Central America, there is an entire dearth of news, which means peace, and therefore is to be taken as a good sign. The Gaceta of the 4th August, has some observations on the subject of the frontiers of Chiapas. "Some days ago," it says, "there was a talk in this capital about what was transpiring in the populations of Chiapas and Soconusco, both on the frontiers of our territory, that a new invasion was being organized similar in object to that headed by SANTOS CRUZ, but apparently with different views and pleadings for the disturbance of public order. CRUZ, however criminal and foolish they have been his projects, it is true endeavored to excite the Indians to rebel, but did not try to bring foreigners to aid him in the invasion of his country. We have hesitated in believing the news that has been brought, that people were being recruited in Comitan for the purpose of invading the Republic. It has been said that D. MIGUEL GARCIA GRANADOS, who, as is well known, was sent out of the Republic in February last, under a promise and bond of not endeavoring directly nor indirectly to disturb the public peace, after having been in the capital of Mexico, came to Chiapas with some half a dozen of adventurers as officers, and established himself in Comitan, having made a sort of alliance with the sanguinary BARRIOS, and other criminals that accompany him, and that they were publicly occupied in forming a force composed of the worst characters to invade the populations of Guatemala. All this seems so incredible that we can scarcely believe it, the attempt being no less absurd than criminal. With what titles could this new revolutionary chief present himself? CRUZ had some notoriety, and had been in the servic of his country. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs has addressed the Governor of Chiapas denouncing such acts, which could not take place without the connivance of the Mexican authorities. The mere permission of such acts infringes international right, seeing that Guatemala and Mexico are at peace. The Semana, of the 4th, says of this subject that the Revista Universal of Mexico had a paragraph headed "serious rumors," which read as follows: "It is said, in reference to communications from Chiapas, that the Guatemala General, PEDRO GOMEZ, at the head of 400 men and four pieces of artillery from Guatemala, had entered into Soconuzco, and was forming an intrenched camp to serve as a base for future operations. We have seen, continues the Semana, that in another number of the Revista Universal the Diario Oficial denied that there was any truth in the rumor, and that the origin was most probably false information, purposely sent to certain periodicals to get up a bad feeling between Mexico and Guatemala."

HONDURAS.

The principal item we find in the Gaceta Oficial of Honduras, of the 8th inst., is a communication from the Bishop of Honduras to the Supreme Government in relation to the collection of diesmas from the people. A decree it seems had been issued by the Government suppressing this tax and putting in its place a contribution. As the people seemed inclined to resist the demands of the Church and follow the dispositions of the Government, the Bishop insists that without the sanction of his Holiness the Pope, the Church could not be deprived of its right to tithes and the collection of them.

SALVADOR.

The Constitutional, of the 18th of August, gives an official account of the report made by Dr. RAFAEL ZALDIVAR to his Government on his return after having successfully negotiated a treaty of commerce, friendship and navigation between his own country and the Government of the King of Prussia. Among other things, the note says that with respect to Consuls, they are only conceded immunities when they are Consuls sent (consules rasos) and citizens of the nation that appoints them, who possess no property in the country, and neither trade nor exercise any sort of industry. The President, in answer, recognizes the high services of Dr. Don RAFAEL ZALDIVAR, and returns him thanks in the name of the supreme Government.

COSTA RICA.

From No. 2 of the Diario de los Debates, of the National Convention of Costa Rica, dated the 25th inst., we take the following items, approved by that Assembly on the 24th: Art. 1. Declares that Ex-President Don JESUS JIMENEZ and his Minister Don A. JIMENEZ and Don EUSEBIO FIGUEROA, have gone beyond the limits allowed for the exercise of their functions and have infringed various laws." Nevertheless other articles of the decree permit both the Ex-President and his fallen Ministers to return to the country without being necessarily subject to a trial, always being understood that they accept what the articles in reference to them determine, otherwise they shall remain subject to be tried in the form and the tribunals which the new constitution shall determine. Don MANUEL ALVARADO was to set out on a diplomatic mission to Peru, Chili and afterward to Bogota, to settle the long-pending question of limits between Colombia and Costa Rica. There was a good deal of popular excitement about the resolutions in reference to Ex-President JIMENEZ, whom the authorities and President appeared to wish to screen. The halls of Congress were generally crowded with an excited populace, who, among other things, wished to know about moneys paid, expended by the Licentiate Julio Volio, which, after some hard sparring on both sides of Congress, it was agreed that the question should be put to the Government.

NICARAGUA.

The candidature of Sr. Quadra, according to the Gaceta of Nicaragua of the 6th ult., seems to be acceptable throughout the country. About two months only are wanting till the elections, yet everything is quiet, and no signs of agitation. Indigo has been extensively planted at Rivas. In the halls of Managua the coffee is promising well. Cotton has been cultivated extensively near Chinandega, and if plants escape the locust, the harvest promises to be at least 10,000 quintals of cotton, besides sugar and other articles, which are cultivated on a large scale. The favorable reception of the name of Don VICENTE QUADRA has also had a good effect on the industry of the Republic. The Gaceta of the 13th says Don RAMON URIARTE, commissioned by the Government of Honduras to arrange the question of limits with Nicaragua, arrived at Leon in the beginning of last week. The engineers of both States having already surveyed all the points, it is expected there will be no difficulty in coming to an amicable settlement.

South America—Effect of the War News in Peru—Chilian Intelligence.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Friday, Sept. 2, 1870.

By the arrival of the Peninsular Steam Navigation Company's steamer Chile, Capt. WILLIAMS, on the 29th ult., late dates have been received from South America, but the news seems to be of little importance.

The following items have appeared in the Panama Star & Herald:

PERU.

According to our Lima correspondent, considerable anxiety prevailed in that city respecting the effect that the hostilities between France and Prussia might have on the Peruvian bonds and securities now held in Europe. The news, however, that in London the bonds remained firm, and in Paris an unsufficeant fall had taken place, restored the general equanimity. The Government especially regarded the matter with particular interest, since by the recent sale of the bonds negotiated in Paris and London to Mr. MEIGGS at seventy-nine per cent., the national pledge was given to cover any loss he might experience from the decline below that figure. Mr. MEIGGS is confident that no material change will take place, and that all parties will have reason to be satisfied with the result of the transaction. Large quantities of material and rolling stock were arriving in Lima and Callao for the use of the Oroya, Puno and Arequipa Railways, and the latter was rapidly advancing toward completion, the first train being announced for the through trip in October next. As soon as this is finished, the Puno line can be pushed vigorously forward. Some brisk attacks had been made in Congress on the policy of the Executive in regard to financial matters, and the Dreyfus contract was made the butt for the arrows of the Opposition. A resolution was introduced to annul this contract, but with a clause that would deter almost any enterprising house or individual from accepting the conditions of the proposed substitute, it being ordered that before the first bonds of the transaction, the advances made by DREYFUS to the Government must be returned to the French house. This bill, it is unnecessary to state, was tabled by a large majority. The Government has so far carried its measures, and one of the dangers apprehended has been successfully tided over. This was the case of the refractory Bishop of Puno, who denied the authority of the Government, while he recognized that of Rome. Accused of treason and held to trial, the religious party in Congress sought to obtain the consent of both Houses to his immediate and unconditional liberation, which was overwhelmingly defeated. According to the leading papers, received by the steam-ship Chili, the Republic is in the enjoyment of peace and progress. Besides the war in Europe, we have a large space taken up with the proclamation of Gen. MELGAREJO, called forth by a sort of rebellion in the Northern Provinces of Bolivia, for the purpose of interrupting the reunion of Asamble Constitutional

CHILI.

We have received dates up to Aug. 10. Congress, besides being taken up with various bills and propositions, was engaged with other subjects—particularly the law of naturalization, the Presidential term, and the Araucanian war. The latter seems to have been given up, at least for the time being; $2,000,000 had been spent since 1861. It was now resolved to preserve the lands retained, and prevent sales. The farewell address of the late United States Minister to Chili, Mr. KIRKPATRICK, has been published. In it, he refers to the share he had in trying to prevent the bombardment of Valparaiso. The English and French Ministers, with the English admiral, agreed to it, but when more Spanish ships arrived, some by force, and the Commodore, MACKAU, had his vessel ready, when the English and French withdrew, leaving the Spaniards to do as they liked.

Base Ball—Atlantics vs. the Olympics.

The Atlantic Club, of Brooklyn, played its return with the Olympic Club, of Washington, on the Capitoline Ground, at Brooklyn, yesterday. At the end of the first three innings it was supposed the latter Club would carry off the honors, as they led the score more than three to one, but the old-time batting for which the Atlantics are famous enabled them in the next two innings to place it runs to their credit on the score-book, and though the Olympics tied them on the last four innings, they could not regain their lost ground. CHAPMAN filled the place of ZETTLEIN, who is sick very well indeed. FERGUSON, though suffering with bloody fingers, allowed but few balls to get by him. GEO. HALL made pretty catches. GUEST, of the other side, came from a sick bed to play the game, and, though playing in the responsible position of left field, which was more than he should have attempted, made some fine stops. BERTHRONG and BURROWS received the applause of the spectators for their individual instances of good play.

We conclude with the score:

Latest Phase of Morris S. Hill's Case—A Professional Bondsman Arrested for Perjury.

JAMES O'NEIL was arrested by United States Deputy Marshal CROWLEY, yesterday, on a charge of perjury, alleged to have been committed by him on Thursday last, in becoming bondsman for MORRIS S. HILL, the defaulting cashier of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank, at Somers, Westchester County. He became HILL'S surety for the sum of $7,500, swearing at the same time that he was the owner of two houses at Nos. 44 and 46 University-place, and that he resided at No. 220 Eighth-street. He also claimed that he was employed as a commission broker by a liquor merchant at No. 89 Pearl-street. All these statements are represented to be false. It is said that No. 220 Eighth-street, if it existed at all, would be about the middle of Tompkins-square. O'NEIL was apprehended in a lager-beer saloon, after a protracted search, by Mr. CROWLEY. He said that there was $50 paid for the bond, out of which he only received $25. He was anxious to have his name kept from publication for fear that it would be seen by "JIMMY" O'BRIEN, as he familiarly called the Sheriff. He waived an examination before Commissioner WOOD, and was fully committed for trial in default of $5,000 bail.

Congressional Nominations.

The rumor that the Collector had made more promises to applicants for position in the Custom-house than there were places in the gift of the Collector, is pronounced, on high authority, to be untrue. No pledges have been made but such as the Collector can perform, and these are very few. With respect to the Statistical Bureau at Castle Garden, it is stated that Collector MURPHY has not yet determined what course to pursue, and will not act hastily, nor at all until he has had an opportunity to give the Bureau a personal examination, which he has not had as yet.

CURRENT NOTES.

Work on the Utica and Elmira Railroad is progressing very satisfactorily. The entire line from Ithaca to Cortlandt is under way.

The largest tow ever seen on the Upper Mississippi, recently left Winona, Minn. It consisted of nine barges, containing 70,455 bushels of wheat.

Active measures are about being taken to develop the mineral resources of Taney County, Mo. Deposits of brown hematite iron ore yielding $30 per ton have already been found.

The colored women of Montgomery, Mo., in order to keep pace with the enterprise of their white sisters in this City, have organized a Sorosis, and have already indulged in a plain tea dinner and speeches. Verily, the world moves.

There is a lady named CRANDALL residing at Norwich, Conn., who on certain occasions during the past few years, has been enabled to call around her 117 great-grandchildren. She is only ninety-six years of age.

The flour mills of Huntington, Derby, Ansonia, Seymour and Oxford, Conn., have lately stopped work in consequence of the drouth. The rivers are almost dry. As a result, hundreds of industrious persons have been compelled to remain idle or seek employment elsewhere.

The thieves confined in the Virginia Penitentiary promise to become a source of profit to the State. They have already earned such a reputation in shoe matters that private persons are beginning to order work through the Chief Warden.

The residents of Eagleville, Mo., were excited lately by the sudden appearance of a strange animal among them. Although somewhat like a lamb in appearance, it set upon a flock of sheep, and devoured several. The hunters are preparing for a grand chase.

During the month of August attempts were made to kill twenty-one persons at St. Louis, Mo., twenty-three lost children were restored to their parents, 455 nuisances were abated, and stolen property valued at $18,146 20 was restored to the rightful owners.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

A Large Portion of Tompkinsville, S. I., Destroyed.

Fourteen Houses and Stores and the Railroad Stables Burned to the Ground—Two Horses Burned—Immense Excitement—Disgraceful Conduct of the Firemen.

The most serious fire that has ever occurred on Staten Island was that which broke out yesterday morning in Tompkinsville and ruined more than one-half of Arietta-street, and a large amount of valuable property, causing in all a total loss of upward of $100,000. Many of the houses destroyed were quite new. By many it is believed to have been the work of an incendiary, and matters as they have been detailed sustain very forcibly this view.

The exact locality of the fire was that portion of Arietta-street leading from Quarantine-landing, and lying between Bay and Minthorn streets. The Staten Island Railroad stables are situated in the former street, and at night contain all the live stock of the Company. About 1½ yesterday morning, Mr. PINCK, the Superintendent, on entering the stables, saw that some oil which had been left there was on fire and had already communicated with a portion of the wood-work. He made an effort, with some of his men, to put it out, but failed, and got badly burned about the hands, arms and neck. Seeing that the flames were spreading rapidly, the alarm was given by ringing the ferry bells. The railroad stables and two others were soon one mass of fire, against which the wood-work of the adjacent buildings stood but little chance of escape.

The fire continued to make its way among the stables in rear of the street, but soon it attacked with increased fury the back of the centre house of the block, which eventually succumbed. The fire communicated to the buildings on both sides; thus the flames traveled both ways, and all the houses being of wood, they were destroyed in a very short time.

In the meantime as many Police as were available—ten, under command of Capt. HOLBROOK—arrived at the scene and did their share of duty in saving life and property; and it is here happily to be added that although the fire was so disastrous to property, and although there could not have been less than 300 persons inhabiting the quarter destroyed, not a single life was lost, nor was any person badly injured. This may be accounted for by the action of Capt. HOLBROOK and his men, aided by several citizens. It is further said that the people in the houses had timely notification from the fire in the stables. They were, therefore, enabled to get out, and some of them to save portions of their property.

During the progress of the fire there was the most intense excitement in the streets—no alone in Tompkinsville, but in the neighboring villages which were each illuminated as if they themselves were victims to the flames. In Stapleton the light was so clear that the smallest article could be distinguished on the sidewalks. At 2 o'clock the fire was at its height, and from every building in the block issued sheets of flame with terrific fury, until at about 4 o'clock the fire began to die out for want of fuel. Every house in the block from Minthorn to Ray-street had disappeared. The only vestiges left behind to tell of their having once existed were the heaps of burned timber that lay on the ground, and seven brick chimneys that stood, each alone among the ruins, about forty feet high. These presented a most unique appearance. There they stood—narrow, shaky pillars of brick, of immense height, and scarcely more than three feet square from the base up. They shook with the wind, and were evidently so dangerous that, at 7 o'clock, four of them were thrown down by the Police. Three were left standing.

There were five fire-engines on the ground, the first of which arrived about forty-five minutes after the alarm was given, and the others were on hand some time after. If we except one of the bucket companies, the engines and men might as well have been a thousand miles away. They made not the slightest effort to assist in putting out the fire; they complained that the village authorities would neither give them proper hose nor other materials which the Department stood in need of, and thus they stood and grumbled while one of the handsomest portions of their Island was being laid waste by the flames. They were asked to form line to the water, as in this manner one engine might supply water to another, and so on to the burning houses; this would have prevented any great strain on the hose, but they refused to do it, and allowed the fire to have its way. The Fire Department is by no means properly attended to by the authorities, and it is therefore in no state for service, as was fully proved at this fire. Mr. DE NYSE telegraphed to New-York for the fire-boat, and in a short time after the Fuller arrived, just in time to witness the last efforts of the flames. The boat, however, was attached to the hose burst, and therefore her services were of little avail.

The Tompkinsville Fire Police, an organization of most respectable citizens, were present, and under the command of Capt. HOFFMAN did excellent service, rendering the county Police great assistance.

THE LOSSES AND INSURANCES.

The loss, especially for a place of the size of Tompkinsville, is very considerable. As nearly as can be ascertained they are as follows:

JOHN DUFFY, liquor-saloon; loss on house $9,000; partially insured in Knickerbocker Company; loss on stock considerable; not known.

—WEBBER; loss $4,000; fully insured in Germania and Harmonia Companies.

Mrs. MORAN; loss $4,000; insured in Home Insurance Company.

JAMES BARDIS; loss $2,000; insured in Home Company for $1,000.

LOUIS YOUNG; loss $3,000; insured in Kings County Insurance Company for $1,500; loss on furniture $500; fully insured.

Mrs. JONES, (three houses;) loss $14,000; insured for $6,000.

HENRY GARNER; loss $2,500; insured fully in the Manhattan Company.

Mrs. HALLIDAY; loss $1,800; insured for $700.

Staten Island Railroad Company; loss $10,000; fully insured.

CHARLES FINCK; loss not known; said to be fully insured.

Mr. MOORE; loss $500; no insurance.

JOHN FERRY; $2,200 on house; no insurance.

HENRY BARDIS; loss on furniture $700; insured for $400.

HARRY NEWPORT; loss on furniture $5,000; fully insured in the Niagara Company.

J. V. CARROLL; loss $10,000; insured for $5,000.

JOHN KING; loss $1,000; no insurance.

The above is as correct a list as at the time could be obtained. There are, however, some omissions. Many of the poor people living in the small shanties lost from $50 to $300 by the destruction of their furniture. Others who had saved their little goods had them out on the road up to a late hour last night, having no place to take them to. This dreadful fire will have an injurious effect on Tompkinsville for some time, as the ground belongs to St. Andrew's Church, and was all leased out. Many of these leases were near expiration, so that it is not likely the lessees will rebuild under the circumstances. The railroad company had two very fine horses burned to death, and several of their cars were badly injured.

Crimes and Casualties.

CHARLES C., alias PETER W. SMITH, of No. 554 Thirtieth-street, was arraigned at the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday, before Judge COX, on a charge of swindling. It appears that on last 10th inst., the prisoner ordered $86 worth of liquors from EDWARD MCCABE, No. 503 Tenth-avenue, the payment to be made when the property was delivered. The liquor was brought to his residence and he retained it, refusing to pay until the evening. When a messenger was subsequently dispatched for the money, the house was discovered to be closed and the warrant was issued for the apprehension of SMITH. It is also alleged that on the 8th the prisoner ordered $700 worth of wines from IRVIN & MCKELSEY, No. 72 Front-street, and presented a check for that amount on the Bull's Head Bank in payment. On making application to have it cashed, they ascertained it was a forgery and returned it to SMITH. The latter at once tore it up, and, as the property had not been delivered, Messrs. IRVIN & KELSEY did not think fit to prosecute. The Judge committed the prisoner for trial at the Court of General Sessions.

At the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, before Justice COX, EMMA STEDMAN was charged by the proprietor of the Belvedere House with swindling him out of $260. The defendant engaged a suite of rooms of the prosecutor a few weeks since, ran a bill to the amount stated, and, in violation of the hotel laws, left without payment. She was held in default of $600 bail.

SUSAN HART, (colored,) was held to answer at the Essex Market Police Court, yesterday, before Judge LEDWITH, on a charge of feloniously assaulting LEAH H. BROWN, by striking her with a razor in the arm.

JAMES LYNCH was detected in the endeavor to enter the premises No. 477 Second-avenue on Sunday night, through the fanlight, by Officer JONES, of the Eighteenth Precinct. Two others who were connected with him in the attempted burglary escaped. LYNCH was brought up at the Essex Market Police Court, yesterday, and held to answer.

JOHN MILLER, of No. 383 Third-avenue, and THOS. MCKENNA, Twenty-fifth-street and Third-Avenue, had an altercation yesterday in reference to the merits of Messrs. SHANDLEY and BRENNAN for the Shrievalty, when MCKENNA drew a jack-knife, with which he stabbed his opponent in the shoulder, inflicting a slight but painful wound. MCKENNA was brought up at the Essex Market Police Court, in the afternoon, and held for trial in default of $300 bail.

BERNARD MCGUINNESS was held to answer, at the Tombs Police Court, yesterday, before Justice DOWLING, for stealing $48 from the person of LAWRENCE WALSH, of No. 31 East Broadway.

POLITICS AND THE CENSUS.

A Manifesto from Mayor Hall—The Federal Census Declared to be Purposely Ineffective—A Census by the Police Recommended—Redistricting the City.

The following communication from Mayor HALL was received by the Board of Assistant Aldermen at the session yesterday, and was referred to a special committee.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, Sept. 12, 1870.

Gentlemen of the Common Council:

I herewith transmit to you a triplicate original of a proclamation which was issued from this office on the 10th inst., in pursuance of an act of the last Legislature. By the terms of the same act it becomes your duty, on or before the 1st of October proximo, to select in each election district a place for registration and polling. It will prove agreeable to all our constituents if each district be selected for the best convenience of the electors, both in respect to topographical situation and area of accommodation. In this connection I deem it my duty to direct your official action to the subject of a recent pretended Federal census. Numerous complaints have been preferred at this office by reputable citizens, and authenticated communications have been sent to the public Press, alleging that such census was partial and ineffective. It was certainly presented at a season of the year when a large percentage of our inhabitants were absent from the City, and when habitations were left in charge of servants who were perhaps dismclined, or probably unable, to give proper and full information. Our tenement-house population is at all times sensitive to the visit of a Federal officer, because it remembers the inquisitorial provost marshals and the draft agents. In some localities I have reason to believe the census agent would ask preliminary questions substantially like this: "How many soldiers could this house turn out?" There was, therefore, a suggestion of concealment made to the tenement-house occupants, and in addition to the innately ineffective and unseasonable manner of taking the census, as well as to the merely ordinary difficulties in acquiring needful information about it. In other districts papers to be filled out and called for were never again asked about. As a special instance of the original omission to prepare a perfect system, certain correspondence in this office evidences that the Federal Superintendent at Washington had omitted from his blanks inquiry respecting a certain item, and the omission not having been discovered until the census began, intimation regarding the item was supplied (at the special request of the Census Bureau) by the exertions of the Police. If the Police can be relied upon for one item by the Federal officials, may not the Police be further intrusted with the furnishing of reliable returns about the item of our City population? My recommendation is that the corporate authority immediate arrangement be made for taking a census through the Police Department of a few districts, and in various parts of the City, so as to furnish more reliable tests; should the comparison between corporate and Federal census show great discrepancies in such districts, that then the work be continued throughout the entire City. It is of the greatest importance that the resources of this growing City should not be belittled for partisan effect. The Federal census just taken is claimed to make apparent that our population has not increased within the past ten years! In the meantime the City has extended throughout many miles of perfected streets. The statistics in our Department of Building verify that about twelve thousand additional houses have been erected during these years, and that a large proportion of such buildings were tenement and lodging-houses. Indeed, every observer knows that ten years' choice or necessity of our City population has caused a preponderance of families toward boarding and lodging-houses, or toward the vicissitudes of hotel or tenement-house life, and thereby concentrated inhabitancy. Upon every side has been manifested large development of Metropolitan force for family and business accommodation of inhabitants who yearly crowd within City precincts from all States of the Union and foreign countries. The emigration statistics of our port evidence that within those ten years about 1,500,000 of immigrants from without the Union have landed at Castle Garden Depot. And these statistics exclude all who have arrived here from foreign ports as passengers, but who are not technically classed as emigrants. The corporate authorities of this great City owe to their constituents the duty of protesting against and rectifying that sacrifice of Metropolitan position to partisan hostility, to accomplish which this recent census was manipulated. By that census, indeed, our political rights are to be sacrificed. We have a right, as a commercial city, to an acknowledged representative character in Congress and State Legislature. When it is remembered that Congressional representation is to be apportioned upon the recent census, there is outlined the distinct partisan motive for diminishing the population of a democratic City. It would not be appropriate to discuss here whether or no Federal statistics were needed to give color to the unjustifiable statements, many times promulgated, in Congressional journals, that the vote of New-York City was disproportionate to its population. But it is appropriate (because based upon official action of the past) to recall that the only time at which the contrary of this latter allegation was contended for, for the same purpose, was when Federal officials deemed it necessary to make the quota as large as possible for the various drafts from 1862 to 1864, and which were enforced by the Provost-Marshals of the then Administration with manifest unfairness toward the great masses of the people. Also to recall that after the necessity for drafting had ceased, and an opportunity was offered five years ago by a State Republican census of depriving New-York City of due representation in Senate and Assembly, there was a "change of base," and the City population was statistically diminished before the new legislative apportionment was made. In now submitting this recommendation for a census test under corporate authority, the Mayor feels that he but moderately reflects the sense of injustice which pervades the public mind against this new discredit of the growth of New-York City.

The Mayor has caused a proclamation to be posted in the vestibule of the City Hall and other public places, stating that as the Common Council have neglected to redistrict the City, he has, according to the power vested in him by law, accomplished that work himself. The location of the new districts is appended to the proclamation.

Chess in Baden-Baden.

The following finely-played game in the grand assemblage of distinguished chess-players at Baden-Baden occurred between Herr WINAWER and Mr. DE VERE:

RUY LOPEZ KNIGHTS' GAME.

And Black wins.

(a) The capture of the rook involved the instant imprisonment of the queen during almost the whole game, and Mr. WINAWER's analysis in a game of this importance must have been of an arduous nature to see his way clear to extricate his queen from her imprisonment.

Steam on Canal-Boats.

In the TIMES, some days ago, attention was called to a new method of applying steam-power to the propulsion of canal-boats, patented by a Mr. GOODWIN, the inventor of the "walking dolls." A private exhibition of the model referred to took place yesterday afternoon, at No. 91 Liberty-street. As a full description of the plan of the machine has been already published in these columns, a repetition is unnecessary. Suffice it to say, that, in the opinion of those present, the ingenious contrivance exhibited yesterday seemed well qualified to answer a want long felt, but hitherto unsatisfied—namely, that of suffering a motive power to be used on canals, in place of the horse-power, which now labors along, at a rate painful alike to man and beast. But the invention should be confined to its original purpose—of application to canals, as they now exist, in order to render its adoption profitable, or probable.

Sharp Sentences by Judge Bedford—A Speedy Trial of the Anti-Gambling Case to be Had.

At the opening of the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, before Judge BEDFORD, a married man named ADAM B. LONG was arraigned on a charge of having committed an indecent assault on CHARLOTTE HARTMAN, aged eleven years, living with her parents, at the corner of Fourth-avenue and Sixty-eighth-street. The testimony was very extensive, but was unfit for publication. Witnesses were produced for the purpose of proving good character for the accused. He was convicted of an attempt at indecent assault, and was sent to State Prison for five years.

The case of WEST, GALWAY and PRESCOTT, the three members of the "Society for the Prevention of Gambling," who were recently indicted for swindling, was marked for trial on Thursday next. The particulars of their operations have been published heretofore. At the solicitation of counsel, WEST was given permission to visit his sick wife in company with a court officer. His wife was represented to be dying with consumption.

KITTY HARRISON and CHARLES SMITH were jointly tried on an indictment for grand larceny, in which they were charged with having stolen $120 from GEORGE W. MOREWAY, a farmer, at a disreputable house in Canal-street. The victim was drugged previous to the theft. Both prisoners were convicted. SMITH was sent to the State Prison for five years. The female was shown to have been used as a dupe by her companion, and was discharged on promise of future good conduct. The Court subsequently adjourned until this morning.

SUIT AGAINST GEN. SHARPE.

Alleged Irregularities in the United States Marshal's Office—Complaint of a Keeper—His Pay Fraudulently Withheld From Him.

United States Marshal SHARPE was cross-examined yesterday in the United States Commissioners' Office before a referee in the suit brought against him by JOHN DOHERTY for the recovery of $947 as keeper's fees, alleged by the latter to have been illegally withheld from him. The complainant in the case was appointed custodian of an India-rubber manufactory, owned by HODGMAN BROTHERS, bankrupts, at Tuckahoe, and served eighty-three days and nights, for which he was only paid $10 a day at the Marshal's office. It is claimed that the Register in Bankruptcy allows $2 50 for each day and night that DOHERTY was employed, but that the lion's share of the money was kept at the Marshal's office. One of Marshal SHARPE's assistants made an affidavit before the Registerin which he made oath that DOHERTY had acted as keeper for eighty-six days and nights. It is known to be a constant practice in the Marshal's office to allow the poor keepers less pay than they are really entitled to and are credited with in bankrupt cases. The money thus fraudulently detained from them is sometimes placed in a so-called "Deputies' fund," and is subsequently divided among the Deputy Marshals, none of it being given to the keepers. Marshal SHARPE testified, yesterday, that he could not separate the amounts paid to each keeper out of the two items of $4s which has been taxed by the Register as keeper's fees in the Hodgman case, but that he would be able to furnish the bill of particulars on Wednesday.

Deputy Marshal ROBINSON and another witness were examined for the purpose of proving that $2 50 per day of twelve hours was the pay for keepers, but that it was the custom to only allow them $2 per day. Gen. TREMAIN, Chief Deputy Marshal, announced that Capt. O'SULLIVAN was the only person familiar with the books at the Marshal's office, and that he was absent from the City at that time. The case was then adjourned until Wednesday next at 1 P. M. It is claimed that Marshal SHARPE will show that $173 and $199 were paid into the "Deputies' fund" in two different sums. The latter amount was not deposited until after DOHERTY had commenced his suit.

Boating—A Challenge Accepted.

Here is what the Captain of the Atalanta Boat Club, yesterday, said to the Captain of the Gulick Boat Club:

NEW-YORK, Sept. 12, 1870.

Mr. Wm. H. Spear, Captain Gulick Boat Club:

DEAR SIR: Your challenge for a three-mile six-oared shell race between the same crews that rowed for the championship on the day of the regatta, Sept. 5, is hereby accepted, the race to be rowed under the rules of the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association. Our representative will meet you at the Columbia Boat-club House on Wednesday evening, the 14th inst., at 8 o'clock, to make all necessary arrangements.

Yours, respectfully,
RUSSELL WITHERS, M. D.,
Captain Atalanta Boat Club.

The Evening Post thus refers to a large failure in Boston, not wholly unexpected from the old embarrassments of the concern which they were barely able to tide over a year or two ago:

"The suspension of the dry goods commission house of FRANCIS SKINNER & CO., of Boston and New-York, was first known on the Street here today. The liabilities are given at four to five millions, and the principal creditors, to the extent of $2,700,000, are the following New-England manufacturing companies: The Pemperell, Laconia, Androscoggin, Manchester and Bates. These Companies are good, and the loss which falls on them will be covered, and in some cases more than covered, by their surplus. About one year ago, the firm stopped selling the goods of these companies, but have never been able to liquidate the balances due on previous sales, although the expectation that they would be able so to do was entertained until within a few days, when their inability was made known. About six months ago the house was, according to report, in trouble, and in the hope of bridging over their difficulties, received at that time the assistance of the Boston banks. The losses by the suspension fall almost entirely on New-England, the paper of the firm not having been offered in this market for the past six months. The last lot that was negotiated here was duly paid. It is now said that the house will pay fifty cents on the dollar. The announcement has been without noticeable effect on this market.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE WAR.

The prospects of peace are brighter. From Paris and Brussels the report is received that Russia, seconded by Italy and Austria, demand an armistice, and that the Prussian Armies advancing on Paris have been ordered to halt to await results. M. THIERS has gone on a secret mission to London, Vienna and St. Petersburg. A Brussels telegram says that the dispatches from the United States expressing the hope that there might be a cessation of hostilities, the dethronement of NAPOLEON having been accomplished, created quite a sensation at Berlin, and copies were at once sent to the King by a special courier. Our Washington special explains that these dispatches are merely those sent in answer to the appeal of the new French Government for intervention to Ministers WASHBURNE, BANCROFT and MOTLEY, the tenor of which has already been given.

The Ministry publicly announced to the Parisians, yesterday, that the garrison at Toul had been furiously attacked, but had repulsed the enemy, dismounted many of their batteries, and placed ten thousand Prussians hors de combat. The attack was begun early in the morning of Saturday, and fighting was continued until after 9 in the evening. Verdun continues to hold out; and so also does Montmédy. The garrison of the latter splendidly repulsed the Prussians on Thursday. Meaux, twenty-five miles from Paris, has been surrounded; and Prussian forces have appeared in several villages, suburbs of Paris, to the east and north-east, one of which, Noisy-le-Grand, is only nine miles from the city. The special reports of these successes led to more activity on the Bourse yesterday, and there was more buying on speculative account than there has been for many days. It is reported that BAZAINE also has made a successful sortie from Metz.

King WILLIAM telegraphs to the Queen concerning the Laon affair. He says that the citadel exploded after the surrender, just as the Prussians were entering, and 350 men were killed, including 200 of the Mobile Guard; and he remarks, "there must have been treason." The Prussian official report of the capitulation of Sedan places the number of prisoners taken at 122,000, instead of 100,000, as previously reported. A large portion of the wounded have been removed, and all the dead in the fields about the city have been buried. It is now asserted that MCMAHON wished to retreat from Sedan to Paris, but was prevented by the orders of PALIKAO, and that he will explain his course to the public as soon as he recovers from his wounds.

It is said that the Prussian authorities surrounded the Emperor's journey to Wilhelmshohe "with exquisite delicacy of care and provision for the dignity and feelings of the prisoner;" and advices from Cassel are that he is treated there like an honored guest of Prussia than as a prisoner. The Empress was concealed in the environs of Brussels three days, while on her way to England.

Another demonstration of enthusiastic Parisians has been made before the American Legation; and yesterday Mr. WASHBURNE, being recognized on the street, was cheered by crowds which surrounded him. Demonstrations of sympathy for the new Republic continue in the northern provinces of Spain.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

A popular outbreak against the Papal authority is reported in the Province of Viterbo. Arrangements for the occupation of Rome, by the Italian troops, are said to be completed. A vote of the inhabitants of the Papal Dominion is then to be taken to determine whether the Pope or the King shall be their ruler. VICTOR EMMANUEL is urged from all quarters to make Rome the capital of the kingdom.... An investigation into the circumstances of the foundering of the British iron-clad Captain is demanded by the Shipping Gazette.... The Juana, bound from Bordeaux to Havana, took fire at sea lately, and was scuttled.... The vessel lately wrecked on the Goodwin Sands, was laden with tobacco.... A project for laying a telegraphic cable from England to America is announced.... The Duke of SALDENHA has left Lisbon for London, to assume the position of ambassador at the Court of St. James.

GENERAL.

The election in Maine yesterday showed Republican gains in many of the towns. The colleagues of Gov. CHAMBERLAIN, in many cases, voted the Democratic ticket, but there is a prospect of a good Republican majority in both branches of the Legislature.

The Panama and West India telegraphic cable was opened for public business yesterday.

A car was thrown down an embankment on the Lehigh and Susquehanna Railroad yesterday, in consequence of the train running over a cow, and several persons were seriously injured.

The Democratic State Convention of Louisiana met at New-Orleans yesterday. About twenty colored delegates were present, and a discussion arose on the question of admitting them.

The latest advices from China represent the Chinese as very violent in their conduct at Tien-tsin, and engaged in concentrating troops at that point.

Cornell University begins its new year with an increased corps of teachers, and larger classes than ever before.

WENDELL PHILLIPS has written a letter formally accepting the nomination for Governor of the Labor Reform Party of Massachusetts.

EDWARD BRADLEY, who was confined in jail in Boston awaiting trial for the murder of his wife, yesterday hung himself in his cell.

A fire occurred at Pomeroy, Ohio, on Saturday last, which destroyed a building of the value of $25,000.

Four persons were killed and one seriously injured at White Sulphur Springs, Ohio, on Friday last, by the explosion of three kegs of powder.

The California State Fair opened yesterday with favorable prospects. Gen. SHERMAN is to be present to-morrow.

The reports of the prevalence of yellow fever in New-Orleans are contradicted. It is stated that the last case was reported two weeks ago, and that there had been but five or six cases before.

WM. MCDONALD, a prominent citizen of Glen's Falls, died on Sunday last, at the age of eighty-six.

A starch-factory, at Watertown, Mass., valued at $5,000, was destroyed by fire, yesterday.

Telegraphic communication has been established between Havana and Santiago de Cuba.

The fifth-sixth anniversary of the battle of North Point was celebrated at Baltimore, yesterday, by the closing of public buildings, display of flags and parades in the street.

Notice has been given by the Post-office Department of a postal convention with the Empire of Brazil, establishing and regulating the exchange of correspondence between that country and this, and fixing the rates of postage.

Census returns are now coming in at Washington at the rate of 2,500,000 names per day.

JOSEPH ARRUNDELL, a Virginia Postmaster, has been arrested to answer the charge of perjury, in taking the iron-clad oath after having voted for the ordinance of secession.

A communication was transmitted by the Mayor to the Common Council yesterday, with a copy of his proclamation redistricting the City, declaring that the United States census of this City is defective and that arrangements should be made for taking one by the municipal authorities.

The Grand Jury for the September term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer was sworn in yesterday. In his charge Judge BARNARD expressed a determination on the part of the authorities to suppress crime in this City.

A large and enthusiastic ratification meeting was held by the Twenty-first Assembly District Grant Club last evening, at which the Republican nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. KAUFMAN, and several other gentlemen spoke. A Woodford and Kaufman Campaign Club, and also a Boys in Blue Club, were organized during the evening.

Friendless France.

Why is it that the French people show so much enthusiasm at this moment in connection with America and Americans? The other day they surrounded the United States Legation and cheered for hours together. Yesterday, as the telegraph informs us this morning, Mr. WASHBURNE was recognized in the street, and instantly the crowd began to cheer. In a few minutes the crowd increased—it does not take long to bring a large assemblage together in Paris in these excited times—and the American Minister received a "most enthusiastic ovation." The explanation of this outburst of feeling is not difficult to find. When a man is plunged in very great distress, his heart overflows toward those who utter the first words of sympathy in his ears. It is the same with nations. France has gone through a bitter experience. The whole world has been against her—in quarters where she looked for kind words she heard only denunciations. Never was a nation so solitary in the midst of great disasters. At last the Government and people of the United States sent over a message of gentler meaning. The proud spirit of a defeated, but not humiliated, people at once is softened, and they send back to us their gratitude for what it has cost us very little to give them.

When it became a question of King against Republic, the sympathies of this country were pretty sure to be transferred to the side of France. Now that NAPOLEON has disappeared from the roll of monarchs, there is no more thorough representative of arbitrary Government left in Europe than the King of Prussia. He has opposed every liberal reform, and only the success of his crafty Minister's policy in strengthening the position of Prussia in Europe, has induced the independent States to cast in their lot with the King's. It is not Prussia which has won in this campaign, but United Germany; and our best hope must be to see Prussia subordinate in the future to the general Confederation. That cannot happen while an upholder of the principle of the Divine right of Kings remains paramount. Intrigues have evidently been set on foot to make King WILLIAM "Emperor" of Germany. We should prefer to see, as one result of the war, a republic established in both Germany and France. France has already freed herself from imperial rule, and now we are told that King WILLIAM stands aghast at this part of his work. He treats NAPOLEON as a reigning Sovereign. He looks upon the Provisional Government with scorn. Can it be supposed that the American people will extend to him their sympathies when he occupies a position so much at variance with their own political instincts? Germany fighting for the integrity of its soil against an Imperial army is one thing; Germany fighting at the bidding of a despot against a Republic is another. We are on the side of people struggling to be free, and, therefore, we are now once more enabled to resume our old cordial relations with France.

Our policy has been tolerably straightforward, and hereafter will bear examination. But what verdict will history pronounce on the conduct of England throughout this struggle? Between the pernicious influences of the Court, the usual blind infatuation of the London Times whenever a foreign question arises, and the imbecility of the Gladstone Government, England has been led into a course which will reflect eternal dishonor upon her. She has fawned upon Prussia, and only been spurned by BISMARCK in return. She has heaped all kinds of insults upon the Power with which it was to her best interests to be at peace, and covered with obloquy a ruler who, on several occasions, encountered the unpopularity of the French people in his efforts to strengthen the English alliance. "If," said Mr. BRIGHT in the House of Commons, on July 21, 1859, "there be one thing which is more distinctly marked in the policy of the Emperor of the French, since his accession to the throne of France, than another, it is his perpetual anxiety, by every means consistent with his own safety, and with the interest, as he believes, of France, to ally himself with England, and with the Foreign policy of England." What return has England made? She has seized the first convenient opportunity she found to heap indignities on the French people and their late ruler at the same time. Can anything be more disgraceful than the language which the London Times has systematically used toward France since the war began? It has rendered itself the organ of Count BISMARCK, only to be treated with contempt. It has made itself the slavish mouth-piece of a Court which has always thought more of its German connections than the honor of England. What is the ancient repute of England compared with the Queen's cousins, daughters, and sons-in-law? What does England owe to the House of Hanover but revolted colonies, miserable wars, gradual degradation from a first to a third class Power, and a whole world embittered against her? If England can never have a Queen like ELIZABETH again, or a King like WILLIAM III., the flag of a Republic cannot float too soon over her royal palaces.

"The English people," wrote M. EDMOND ABOUT lately, "stimulate their cold hearts with all the generous blood our soldiers have shed upon the battle-field, and cast a thought neither toward Belgium, nor Holland, nor the Dutch colonies, nor to that rivalry of the seas which would avenge our defeat upon themselves if the fate of arms condemned us without appeal." If England's proper place in this struggle was not by the side of France—and we are not prepared to go so far as to contend that it was—at least it was her duty to have refrained from outrageously insulting a brave and noble people overtaken by sudden and vast calamities. Has France made any compact with England that she has not faithfully observed? It is easy enough to turn upon her with jibes in this hour of her misery. But the Times, which is foremost in doing the dirty work—was it not the first to prostrate itself in the dust before NAPOLEON after the coup d'état? Has it not contrived to render England detested all over Europe, and to create a feeling of animosity toward her in the United States which fifty years of British diplomacy cannot obliterate? The last mistake has been the worst of all—and bitterly England will have cause to rue it. If Lord PALMERSTON had been living, the Court and all its influence would have failed to drag England into its present degradation. But Lord PALMERSTON was the last of the English Ministers who had the courage to study the welfare of his country, rather than the decrees of a monarch whose views of foreign affairs are dictated by hereditary prejudices and German connections.

Breathing Time.

There is a partial lull in the operations of the war. The besieged cities continue their defense, with varying degrees of fortune. The provinces continue their contributions to the strength of the capital. But the march of the Germans is for the day stayed. Almost within hailing distance, they are suddenly brought to a stand, and rumor is busy with the cause. Russia and Austria, it is said, urge an armistice, and there is talk of the impression produced at Berlin by the utterances of the United States in behalf of peace. Meanwhile, M. THIERS has left Paris on a secret mission to London, Vienna, and St. Petersburg, and there are signs of a more hopeful spirit among the leaders of the Republic than has been observable for some days.

It is evident that statesmen are to be heard in this contest as well as soldiers. Continental Europe begins to realize its interest in the questions to be settled; and BISMARCK is not blind to probabilities which the imperious old King might not pause to consider. He is able now to say whether slaughter shall go on or cease; but when the adjustment of the terms of peace shall be reached, other Powers will be entitled to judge of the equities involved. The disgraceful selfishness which leads England to discard its obligations as a nation is happily not contagious. Russia and Austria are not disposed to be passive spectators while the national existence of France is in jeopardy, and the Prussian Minister prudently demands breathing time to consider the possible consequences of his master's policy. There are, moreover, mutterings from home which it would not be wise to ignore. The republican element which is diffused throughout Germany appreciates the inconsistency that would make war against an Emperor, and then continue war to restore that Emperor to the Tuileries;—and for domestic discontent the strategy of VON MOLTKE does not provide. Still further, the friendly warning that emanated from Washington reveals the inherent weakness of a crusade against the French Republic; and with all its strength, Prussia is not strong enough to defy the moral sense of mankind. There is a power which armies cannot annihilate, and this power it is which protests against the understood purpose to force upon the people of France a Government at variance with their will.

The halt may be brief, but it will be useful. It will help to determine where rests the responsibility of prolonging the conflict, if it is to be prolonged, and what are the inclinations of the two Powers immediately concerned. The moderation which marked the origin of the Republic will be best followed by reasonableness when the conditions of peace are to be considered. And the final vindication of Germany is dependent upon the restriction of the purposes of the war within the original limits, and the enforcement of conditions which are obviously essential to the maintenance of future peace. The sagacity of BISMARCK is at this moment a better basis of reliance than the magnanimity of the King.

Gen. Woodford and the Germans.

The Leader, the weekly organ of Tammany Hall, betrays the nervous anxiety of the Democracy with regard to the German vote in the coming election, by printing in its last issue the following paragraph fourteen times in large capitals, on its editorial page:

"Let the voters of this City never forget, during the just-opened campaign, that STEWART L. WOODFORD, now the Republican candidate for Governor against JOHN T. HOFFMAN, by his casting vote when Lieutenant-Governor, many times prevented the amelioration of penalties against Germans for quietly opening gardens on Sunday and drinking lager-beer without disorder."

Our German fellow-citizens must feel highly complimented at the respect which Democratic newspapers and Democratic politicians pay alike to their intelligence and to their principles. The above paragraph, which is a fair sample of the political arguments addressed to them by the Democracy, presupposes two things. First, that Germans have not sense or knowledge enough to distinguish between truth and fiction; and second, that the chief end and aim, or as the World puts it, "the dearest and most sacred right" of a German is to drink lager-beer in a garden on Sunday. Lieut.-Gov. WOODFORD never did anything of the kind attributed to him, for the simple reason that neither he nor any other Lieutenant-Governor in this State ever had a casting vote in the passage of a law. On motions and resolutions relating to the order of proceedings in the Senate, the Lieutenant-Governor, in case of a tie among the members, is allowed to give the casting vote, but in no case is he allowed any voice in the passage of a bill.

What Gen. WOODFORD did do when Lieutenant-Governor, was this: A motion was made in the session of 1868 to take from a standing committee a certain bill repealing the penalties imposed many years previously on the sale of liquor on Sundays, and refer the bill to the Committee of the Whole. There was a tie vote on the motion, and Lieut.-Gov. WOODFORD gave the casting vote against it. The Republicans at that time had two majority in the Senate. Since then a new Senate has been elected, which has a Democratic majority of four, together with a Democratic Lieutenant-Governor for presiding officer, and a Democratic Governor to sign any bill that it chooses to pass. The new Senate has held one session, and what did it do? Were the penalties against the Sunday liquor traffic repealed? Not a bit of it. They stand now just as they stood then. A bill to repeal them was introduced last Winter, but it was found to have so little chance of passing the Senate that the party did not dare to press it to a vote. Had they done so, it would have been defeated by a large majority. It is easy for Democrats in the Legislature, when their party is in the minority, and has none of the responsibilities of legislation, to introduce all sorts of bills to catch this or that class of votes; but when they are in power, and have to acknowledge their own measures, they are not so ready to give them a place on the statute book. One thing the Republican Party has not done; it has not given pledges to the Germans, when out of power, to enact certain laws which it has refused to enact when in power. What it proposes to do now on the lager-beer question is plainly stated in the platform adopted at Saratoga. It proposes to take the liquor question out of the Legislature, and put it in the hands of the people of each county, where it belongs. This is the doctrine of popular sovereignty, which is, or ought to be, a Democratic doctrine. The Germans are perfectly satisfied with this disposition of the matter, and on this, as on other questions, heartily indorse the platform adopted at Saratoga. The Democracy see this, and in it they see their own defeat in the coming election. Hinc illa lachryma.

The Republican "Split" in Missouri.

We see, with regret, a disposition in some quarters to assail with much bitterness the promoters of the second Republican ticket in Missouri, and to denounce the nominations as in the interest of the Democracy. The Tribune, in its anxiety to serve Gov. MCCLURG as an ultra protectionist, began the attack, and politicians and editors who are of its way of thinking in tariff matters are following its example. Mr. GRATZ BROWN is held up to opprobrium as an enemy in disguise, and the movement of which he is the chosen leader is represented as part of a deep-laid plot to break down the Republican Party.

From this version of the case it might be inferred that between the positions occupied by MCCLURG and BROWN, respectively, there is some wide and general difference, and that the ticket headed by BROWN is an indication of hostility to established Republican policy. The truth is, however, that except in regard to a single question, the two platforms are identical; and upon the exceptional question, which relates to disfranchisement and disabilities generally, the Brown position harmonizes with the national platform, while the McClurg position is in spirit and effect at variance with it. We have already shown that the resolution relating to the tariff and taxation which was adopted by the Convention that nominated MCCLURG is as liberal as any rational revenue reformer could desire. It is, in fact, identical with the resolution adopted by the supporters of BROWN, who is a revenue reformer of the most decided type. The same may be said in reference to other subjects. Both sections of the party are hearty in their indorsement of the Grant Administration, in their support of reconstruction and its results, and in their determination to perpetuate Republican supremacy. In these respects there is nothing in either platform to which the most captious critic can object.

The sole point of divergence is the question of disfranchisement, which is local in its character, and is impregnated with all the acrimony of a local quarrel. The circumstances of the State render this the distinctive issue of the canvass. A multitude of its citizens are denied the political privileges of citizenship, not as a penalty of convicted crime, but as a consequence of the strife to which Missouri, in common with other border States, was exposed during the war. Of the expediency of divesting large numbers of political power, so long as the exercise of that power impaired, or seemed likely to impair, loyal authority, it is not necessary now to speak. The wisdom of continuing the disabilities is the question to be considered. Tennessee, for a time sternly proscriptive, discarded proscription when it elected SENTER,—the seemingly implacable BROWNLOW identifying himself with the change with a warmth that sufficiently indicated the current of Republican sympathy. It was confessed that any possible good to be expected from disabilities was more than counterbalanced by the irritation, the heartburnings, the sense of injustice and wrong, which disabilities entailed. All these evils are in full play in Missouri, some of whose most substantial citizens are denied participation in its affairs. There can be no sudden re-enfranchisement because of constitutional obstacles, but inevitable delay only makes more necessary the formation of some definite policy upon the subject. The McClurg Republicans leave it open: their views, and the views of their candidate, however, are known to be unfavorable to the continuance of disfranchisement. On the other hand, the Brown Republicans favor the removal of all disabilities at the earliest possible period. They deprecate the existing condition of things as a fertile source of hate, and urge a liberal course as essential to the welfare of the State and as conducive to the prosperity of the party.

It is apparent, then, that, however much the division in the party is to be deplored, there is nothing in the circumstances connected with it which warrants imputations upon the good faith, or the fidelity to the Republican organization of GRATZ BROWN and the Republicans associated with him in the enfranchising movement. The services rendered by Mr. BROWN to the Republican cause in Missouri have been too conspicuous and efficient to be forgotten; and among those associated with him are several tried and influential leaders of the party. He stands side by side with Republicans so staunch and true as Gov. FLETCHER and Senator CARL SCHURZ; and the fact should put to shame the authors of the attempt to heap odium upon the promoters of the second ticket. Indeed, the proposal to remove disabilities in Missouri is simply the carrying out, locally, of the general proposition which the Convention that nominated GRANT adopted at the instance of CARL SCHURZ; and it is in strict harmony with the policy recommended by several of the Southern States, and espoused by prominent men in Congress. The "regularity" of the McClurg Convention prevents controversy as to its relation to the party, but we cannot ignore the fact that its distinctive point of difference with the Brown platform also separates it from the policy proclaimed at Chicago in 1868, and from the whole tendency of Republican opinion in other States.

The "split" in Missouri cannot be healed while this campaign goes on. The McClurg and the Brown sections of the party will fight the question of enfranchisement to the end. It should be possible, however, so to conduct the canvass that no lasting causes of severance shall be created. This question settled, the only obstacle to party unity will be removed, and they will incur grave responsibility who introduce needless pretexts for quarrel, and intensify angry differences by impugning the integrity of candidates on either ticket.

The French Republican Platform.

We have repeatedly referred to the disposition which has been shown, even by the Press of this country, to disparage the present Republican leaders of France. Even when avowed opposition has been avoided, there has been displayed a desire to "damn them with faint praise," which is equally remote from the generosity they are entitled to expect here, as from a due perception of the actual merits and capabilities of the men in question. The Empire, it cannot be too steadily borne in mind, was no school for statesmanship. A personal ruler must be CÆSAR or nothing, and must, by the very necessity of having no rival near the throne, be served by second-rate men. A Government so conducted lowers the whole tone of political debate, and forces opponents to use invective instead of argument, from the sheer impossibility of controlling the affairs of the State through an administration whose accountability is only nominal. Partly, therefore, from the absence of any real power in the representatives of the nation, and partly from their incorruptible Republicanism, the great majority of the present rulers of France are almost untried in the practical problems of modern politics. The one prevented them from developing any constructive talent in opposition, just as the other withheld them from any opportunity of doing so officially. Those who have previously acquired experience in the parliamentary struggles under LOUIS PHILIPPE, and during the brief existence of the last Republic, find, equally with their younger compeers, a new sphere of administrative effort, and a new range of political difficulties.

We lately adverted to the economic principles of M. JULES SIMON, as an evidence of the ability which existed in the new Government. The latest Parisian files furnish a manifesto published by the provisional Minister of the Interior, M. GAMBETTA, which is equally suggestive with that of his colleague, and is equally valuable as an evidence of a statesman-like grasp of the existing political necessities of France. The document, which is in the form of a letter to the Progrès de Lyon, sets out with a declaration of continued adhesion to the "programme at once Republican and Conservative," which he adopted at the elections of 1869. M. GAMBETTA candidly recognizes the fact that democracy has its abuses as well as absolutism. While justly condemning Cæsarism as "the most ruinous and bankrupt of political transactions," and announcing that the doctrine of the Divine right has been finally abolished, he characterizes Jacobinism as "a ridiculous and diseased parody." A political order based upon universal suffrage, which shall control foreign policy as well as internal affairs, and whose embodiment shall be found in republican institutions respecting equally the rights of the workman and the "sacred rights of property,"—such is the ideal which M. GAMBETTA, in opposition, proposed to realize, and which, in office, he is now engaged in working out. He is not unmindful either of difficulties or dangers. He shows that the fears of one class must be allayed, and the distrust of others abolished. All must be brought to entertain a love for democracy. The proletariat must confide in the class above them. He discerns in the war a great cohesive influence by the necessity it imposes of the same communion of sacrifice, of self-denial, and of heroism. For the moment, his motto is "everything for our native land and liberty," and afterward comes the task of proving that "the Republic is henceforth the sole condition of the internal safety of France, and of the equilibrium of Europe." In this task, the chiefs of the French Republic have the sympathies of every true friend of freedom, and the enunciation of a political creed at once so conciliatory, progressive, and peaceful, is another proof of how little the world has to fear from the latest triumph of European democracy.

To justify the Mayor's proposition to test experimentally the accuracy of the recent census by instituting a fresh census through the instrumentality of the Police, it is not necessary to attribute partisan motives to those whose negligence has called forth loud and very general complaints. The Mayor suggests that there is a partisan purpose to be served in understating the population of the City; but, on the other side, it may also be said that political considerations will impair the trustworthiness of any local report upon the subject. It should be enough that the arrangements recently made by the Federal officials have not commanded the confidence of our citizens. There has been gross negligence or gross incompetency somewhere. Every man we meet testifies from personal knowledge as to the inaccuracy of the returns. Hundreds of cases are known in which the papers, after having been left, were not again collected; and yet more numerous are the cases in which no effort whatever was made to obtain information. This is not the way to make a census.

The continued and successful holding out of Metz, Strasbourg and Toul is almost as remarkable as the thorough collapse which the French Armies have suffered in the field. In 1792 the siege of Thionville occupied the Prussians for two months, and was abandoned after all. CARNOT wrote, for the first revolutionary epoch, a book on the defense of fortified places, in which he laid it down as a first principle that "every soldier charged with the defense of a fortress should resolve to perish rather than surrender." Degenerate as the Frenchmen of today may in some respects be, when compared with their grandfathers, they have evidently not forgotten this maxim.

"This fearfully, constantly-increasing and ever-to-be-regretted era of crime," as Judge BARNARD calls it, deserves all the adjectives that can be heaped upon it, from the Bench or elsewhere. It is questionable, however, if the Judge's analysis of its causes was quite as copious as his description of it. Unlike Falstaff, he does not appear to consider the breed of scoundrels as "the cankers of a calm world and a long peace." On the contrary, it is, according to Judge BARNARD, a long war that has given the present generation its superabundance of vagabonds. Without attempting to decide where authorities conflict, we would suggest that slow-footed justice has had something to do with the phenomenon. Now that some disposition is manifest to make punishment swift and certain on the heels of crime, we may escape the dreadful necessity apprehended by Judge BARNARD of requiring a generation to weed out our surplus of rascality.

The position assumed by our Government, with reference to the European belligerents, is, as defined by the latest explanations, in perfect harmony with the foreign policy indicated by the founders of this Republic, and adopted as best suited to our position in the civilized world. The danger of our intervention in European quarrels furnishing a pretext for interference in our affairs on the part of the Governments of the Old World, is one which it has been our consistent practice to avoid, and which the President's dispatch to the Prussian Government in no way incurs. In the van of the free institutions of the world, we should be untrue to the obligations which such a position entails, did we not show our readiness to negotiate on behalf of justice and humanity. Since our Government only tenders its good offices subject to the joint invitation of the contending Powers, and declines to afford the slightest color to a charge of European alliance, the most hypercritical will scarcely find cause for nothing but satisfaction with the course pursued.

Our Irish fellow-citizens have selected the proper time for giving expression to their ancient and long-standing sympathy with their brother Celts of France. Now that there is no need to discriminate between the dynasty of NAPOLEON and the French people, every friend of Republican institutions may, without misgiving, swell the current of sympathy that every day sets more powerfully toward the new Democratic régime in France. The copious eloquence of last evening probably enabled the meeting to dispense with the aid of music in adding to their enthusiasm, and the abrupt exit of the musicians may thus have been unnoticed. But one is tempted to wonder whether the unsuspecting Teutons, whose patriotism revolted against the Marseillaise, were beguiled into the tents of the enemy, or whether they had made a compromise between principle and interest, which only failed to resist the supreme test of the revolutionary anthem.

We find in the Panama Star & Herald a word for the South American Republics. With the trifling exception of the Provinces around the River Platte, where assassination and rebellion are still the prevailing types of political activity, and with a reservation on the score of Venezuela, which halts somewhat in the path of progress, our contemporary assures the world that the Spanish-speaking Republics show an evident intention "to behave better for the future." While it is highly satisfactory to learn that Peru and Bolivia are getting tired of fighting, and that the former is in the full tide of railway construction, while its neighbors, on the Pacific side of the Andes, at least, are emerging from a chronic state of social chaos, we can scarcely expect very much from the very cautious vaticination of the Panama journal. Our wonder would have been greater had the possibility of a worse state of things been announced than has existed, of late years, in South America.

LOTTA AT NIBLO'S.

The setting in of the Fall dramatic season brings before audiences an almost unvarying number of familiar faces. Many are given a general welcome, the charm of others is debated, a few are recognized because pleasant to that majority of jurors called the public. It is an easy task to greet the former. Genius, talent, and industry are themes of perennial freshness, and estimates of the excellencies of Mr. JEFFERSON'S and Mr. BOOTH'S acting, and of the beauties of voice and style of a Patti and a Nilsson suggest and bear much refashioning. It is not an ungrateful labor, either, to seek for traits of interest, the detection of which is claimed elsewhere. Discovery is not always achieved, it is true, but an investigation sheds light upon the qualities of its subject. When it becomes necessary, however, to strive to account for an influence to the elements of which a hundred examinations have failed to give substance, the nature of the duty is changed. A great actor's rehearsal of the story of "Rip Van Winkle" will generate a score of essays from one pen. A portraiture of "Firefly" by a bright and pretty girl will make a single one impossible. In the case of Miss LOTTA, criticism, once unsuccessfully attempted, remains unaccomplished. Her popularity is not a thing for discussion, but a matter of fact. Nothing is more real than the little lady's hold upon the playgoer's friendship, and nothing more intangible than the power governing it. Proof to this effect was again afforded at Niblo's last evening, and again was the inquiring mind confused beyond hope of illumination. Miss LOTTA is still young, vivacious and confident of self. Happily for her prosperity, a childlike countenance and form, a tuneful voice and a merry laugh are still hers. VICTOR HUGO, in a comparison drawn somewhere between lively children and kittens, regrets that out of the grace and playfulness of both should only come, as a rule, the solemn stupidity of the full-grown puss. No consequence of the kind prompts our sorrow as yet, in the case of Miss LOTTA, but we cannot dispel an apprehension that ultimately the comparison may be borne out. The heroine of "Heartsease," though, appears still unconcerned as to the future, and so the difficulty of writing of her continues to be as great as ever. There is, therefore, now to be offered the bare chronicle only of the satisfactory results of her performance. They were of the habitual order. A very large audience occupied the theatre, and united in a cordial reception at the outset. Laughter and applause—the technical but unavoidable words—were frequent during the entertainment, and recalls followed the fall of the curtain at the close of each act. The drama, a new one here, is from the pen of Mr. EDMUND FALCONER. It embodies a simple story, the conclusion of which can be seen from the first. This is divided into a prologue and three acts, each portion culminating in an impressive picture. Briefly, it runs thus: Charles Villiers, being ruined, is urged to go to California to retrieve his fortunes. The advice comes from the family of his wife, and is heeded by Villiers, who is next met in El Dorado with May, Wylderose, his blithe and bonny daughter. While in the Golden State May becomes enamored of Lionel Houghton, an adventurer like her father, and unknown to her, though in reality her cousin. All sorts of adventures tread upon the heels of this event. May, swinging across a gulch by means of a rope—as in the cave in "Colleen Bawn"—saves Lionel's life. Then, at a later day, May unearths a nugget of prodigious size, and routs the robbers who would despoil her of it. Finally the scene is shifted to England, where the miners don evening dress, and the singing by the May of the Mountains in homespun, is repeated by metropolitan May in robes of richest sheen. Needless to add that a marriage is the material of the closing tableau. During the progress of the drama a banjo solo is performed and a clog dance is danced, both deeds being done last night amid endless demonstrations of approval. The gayety and archness of Miss LOTTA afforded throughout unbounded delight. A Yankee from the ordinary mould, Hiram Doolittle by name, added, we must mention, to the amusement of the evening. Mr. VINING BOWERS fills the part. Mr. FRANK LAWLOR is Villiers, and Mr. THEODORE HAMILTON, Lionel. The remaining characters are assumed by Messrs. FITZGERALD, E. B. HOLMES, FLEMING and RENDLE, and by Mrs. SKERRETT, and Misses BESSIE SUDLOW and VIRGINIA BUCHANAN. Let us not omit to notice that the scenery from the brush of Mr. VOEGTLIN is altogether new, and that, in a word, no pains have been spared to make "Heartsease" worthy of a permanent success. The engagement of Miss LOTTA, at Niblo's, extends over six weeks.

Reopening of the Children's Aid Society Industrial Schools.

The industrial schools of the Children's Aid Society were reopened yesterday, after a Summer vacation of seven weeks. This Society, which commenced its operations on a small scale some eighteen years ago, in a destitute section of the First Ward, has become one of the largest and most useful of our benevolent organizations. Its schools are now planted in almost every locality where poverty and ragged children abound, from the crowded tenements of the First Ward to the "squatters" shanties of "Dutch Hill" and "Mackerelville." At these schools from 3,000 to 4,000 poor children, unfit to attend the public schools, are daily educated, and partly clothed, and fed. Most of the schools re-opened with a full attendance of scholars, delighted to look again upon the friendly faces of their faithful teachers.

During vacation the schools have been thoroughly cleaned and repaired. The teachers return to their work full of new life and vigor. Mr. BRACE, the efficient Secretary, is again busy in the executive chair at the Central Office in Fourth-street; and, altogether, reopening day presents a wide and fruitful field of benevolent labor, surrounded by a corps of efficient and devoted laborers.

THE GERMANS FOR WOODFORD.

Grand Ratification Meeting at the Twenty-Second Ward Wigwam.

An Enthusiastic Demonstration—Addresses by Sigismund Kaufman, Gen. Sharpe and Others—The Proceedings of the Saratoga Convention Indorsed.

In pursuance of a call previously published in the German local papers, the Germans of the Twenty-second Ward, without distinction of party, last night, held an immense mass-meeting at the large hall in Forty-ninth-street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, called the Wigwam. The hall was filled by a vast audience long before the proceedings were commenced.

At about 8½ o'clock the meeting was called to order, and Mr. M. ELLINGER was called upon to preside. In a brief speech he demonstrated that the Germans of this district now have an opportunity to throw off their party shackles, which for years have divided them. For years, he said, the German citizens of the district have been divided in two factions, both tools of the leading parties. United action in the approaching campaign would insure to the Germans success. He made a graceful allusion to Gen. SIGEL and Senator SCHURZ, and their names were greeted with loud applause. At this stage of the proceedings, a procession of citizens, headed by a band of music, appeared in the hall, escorting the speakers of the evening, who took seats on the platform, amid enthusiastic demonstrations on the part of the audience. The speaker concluded by saying that they were now assembled, not as Democrats nor as Republicans, but as German citizens, to unite in carrying out the principles that they believed to be just.

At this stage the Wieland Mænnerchor sang a patriotic chorus, which again aroused the enthusiasm of the audience.

A list of Vice-Presidents and Secretaries was then read and adopted, and the first speaker,

ADDRESS OF GEN. SHARPE.

Gen. GEORGE H. SHARPE, was introduced, who came forward amid the cheers of the auditory. Gen. SHARPE, in his introductory remarks, alluded to the fact that since the Germans had had the opportunity to wrap the sword side by side with the Americans, the latter knew that the German heart belonged to them, and now the hearts of the Americans are with the Germans; now that the German nation abroad is struggling for its national unity since the war-cry of the French was raised "to the Rhine! to the Rhine!" Now let us strike hands as we struck them at Saratoga, where the strongest men that the Republican Party has produced for ten years were represented. The Germans must have strong men to acquire this confidence, and they, the Americans, know it. He believed that he should have been before them before. "You might say that in the temperance question we have made a mistake, but you should have remained with us and told us your grievances," and that would have brought the Republican Party to their senses. [Cheers.] They should have remained with them. He knew it was wrong to go to peaceable meetings and take respectable people quietly enjoying themselves by the strong arm of the law. But it did not require defeat to understand this, and he thought the true point had been reached to settle this matter. At the conclusion of the General's speech, the band played the famous national hymn, "What is the German's Fatherland."

RESOLUTIONS.

The Secretary, Mr. WM. LOEW, then read a series of resolutions, with a preamble, declaring that as by the glorious example shown by the Germans in Europe, it was demonstrated that by unity German influence will be strong, and that by unity they will be recognized as a people of culture, therefore it is the duty of the Germans in this country to unite with those elements of society which represent the progressive and cultured classes, but that no affiliation should be had with any party which will encroach upon our public school system, and endanger our free institutions, nor with any party which is prejudiced against the German element. The nomination of STEWART L. WOODFORD and SIGISMUND KAUFMAN for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor are indorsed, the latter an acknowledgement to the German element and its interest.

It was further resolved that a campaign club for the Twenty-second Ward shall be permanently organized, not only for the present campaign, but to remain in operation hereafter.

These resolutions were adopted by an unanimous vote, whereupon the Mænnerchor chanted the now famous German war song, "Die Wacht am Rhein," with grand effect.

The Chairman now introduced the Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. SIGISMUND KAUFMAN, who, after a flattering interruption, said that the Americans have certainly cause to respect the Germans in this country, when it is remembered that they were the element which, for instance, subdued the rebellion in Missouri and saved that State for the Union. If they did not wish the State of New-York to be controled any longer by a band of corruptionists, they must be united. If they wished honest elections, they should be firm in carrying out their principles. Why could not all venerable Germans, even if they for long years adhered to the Democratic Party, go with them in this move, and show the Americans that honesty with the Germans is the rule, and roguery the exception? He, the speaker, would never accept an election which had been carried by fraudulent means. Fraud should be guarded against, so that the votes of honest men should not be neutralized, but by united action there would be no doubt concerning the result of the campaign on the 8th of November. But another very important thing was to be considered. If in the cities of New-York and Brooklyn they would have honest elections, they should assist the authorities, and if this was not done, the apathy of the people in the interim would become so strong that all hope would vanish. The people in the interior, who have to pass over long roads to their polling places, would finally abandon all efforts in that direction, if they see that they are of no effect, and that their votes are neutralized. The speaker concluded his remarks amid enthusiastic cheers.

The Wieland Mænnerchor sang another patriotic war song.

It was announced that the Republican candidate for Governor, Gen. STEWART L. WOODFORD, was unable to be present during the evening, to address the meeting, he having been called away from the City by telegraph on important business.

The organization of the Campaign Club, it was announced, will take place on Saturday, when the names will be enrolled and the officers elected. The meeting then adjourned with cheers for the Republican ticket.

WOODFORD AND KAUFFMAN.

Grand Rally of the Grant Club of the Twenty-first Assembly District—Speeches by Hon. Sigismund Kaufman, H. P. Allen, James Thompson, Mr. Barnett, Mr. Ketchum, and others.

The Twenty-first Assembly District Grant Club held an enthusiastic ratification meeting last evening at their head-quarters, corner of Third-avenue and One Hundred and Nineteenth-street. EDGAR KETCHUM, President of the Club, occupied the chair, and the hall was crowded with leading citizens and Republicans of the Twenty-first District. Mr. H. P. ALLEN presented a series of resolutions, heartily indorsing the State ticket nominated at Saratoga, and pledging the cordial co-operation of the Club in securing its triumphant election. The resolutions were unanimously adopted. The President then introduced as the first speaker, SIGISMUND KAUFMAN, the Republican nominee for Lieutenant-Governor who briefly addressed the meeting.

SPEECH OF MR. KAUFMAN.

He said that the Fifteenth Amendment had secured equal rights to all men, and there was, therefore, no longer need of discussing the old question of Slavery or Anti-slavery. We could now turn our attention to the affairs of this State, so badly misgoverned by a party calling itself Democratic, but which was ruled by a few unprincipled men without character or education, who looked to their own aggrandizement and enrichment, and not to the public good. [Applause.] One of the chief questions at issue in this campaign was the purity of the ballot-box. It was for the Republican Party to guarantee to the people what they had not had for years past—a fair election. [Applause.] In their efforts to do this, he had no doubt they would meet the co-operation of all honest Democrats. The people were determined not to be any longer robbed of their franchise, and cheated out of their rights by fraudulent votes. [Applause.] If, under the law of Congress, we shall succeed in getting an honest election, he had not the least doubt that the Republican Party would achieve a glorious triumph at the coming election. [Great applause.] The State of New-York, in his opinion, was and always had been overwhelmingly Republican, and this Fall it would roll up a larger majority than ever before. [Applause.] He believed we would this Fall receive the votes of a large number of people who had heretofore been misled into voting the Democratic ticket. The country vote would also come out in full strength this Fall if it could be assured of a fair vote in this City. It only required thorough organization and a little energetic labor for the Republican Party to elect its ticket triumphantly, and plant its banner once more on the State Capitol. [Great cheering.]

SPEECH OF COL. M'LEOD MURPHY.

The Chairman then introduced Col. MCLEOD MURPHY, who addressed the meeting in a very witty speech, in which he gave some home thrusts to the sham Democracy, to ANDY JOHNSON and other public impostors. His remarks were received with constant laughter and applause.

SPEECH OF H. P. ALLEN.

Mr. HORATIO P. ALLEN next took the stand, and made an effective speech in behalf of Republican principles and the Republican ticket nominated at Saratoga. He exposed deception and ingratitude which the Democracy had practiced upon their German followers, and said he believed they had at last found out who were their true friends, and would hereafter be found voting the Republican ticket. He urged the necessity of vigilance and hard work to prevent fraudulent voting at the coming election, and secure an honest ballot. He hoped every Republican in the Twenty-first District would consider himself one of a committee of the whole to work incessantly for the triumph of the ticket. [Cheers.]

Capt. JAMES THOMPSON was then called on, and responded in a few pointed remarks, which brought down the house. He urged his hearers to bear one thing in mind. There were many Tammany Republicans in this City who were nothing but play second fiddle to TWEED, SWEENY & Co., and who co-operate with them in all their schemes for retaining power. These men must be put down—kicked out of the party. [Great applause.] He hoped every true Republican would watch these men, and use his best endeavors to drive them from the party, where they are only spies into the ranks of the Democracy, whose tools they are. [Tremendous applause.]

Mr. BARNETT then addressed the meeting, heartily endorsing the nominees of the party, and was followed by Mr. KETCHUM, the President of the Club, who reviewed in a clear and argumentative discourse the position of the two parties and the questions at issue in the approaching campaign.

The meeting closed with nine cheers for the nominees of the ticket, which were responded to by all-mounted cannon stationed in front of the head-quarters.

ORGANIZATION OF A WOODFORD AND KAUFMAN CAMPAIGN CLUB.

Immediately after the adjournment of the ratification meeting, another meeting was held in the hall to organize a Woodford and Kaufman Campaign Club. The meeting was called to order by Mr. JOHN A. EAGLESON, who was appointed temporary Chairman. An election of officers of the Campaign Club was then held, and WM. HAW, Jr., was unanimously elected permanent President; S. H. KNAPP and NELSON CRAWFORD, Vice-Presidents; WM. FORD and JAMES MCKENNER, Secretaries, and JAMES M. THOMPSON, Treasurer. A standing committee of five was appointed by the Chair to connect the Club in conferences with other campaign clubs throughout the City, and the meeting then adjourned.

THE BOYS IN BLUE.

Subsequently, an organization of the Boys in Blue was effected by JOS. MCDONALD, so that the Republican Party is now fully equipped and ready for action in the Twenty-first Assembly District, and they manifest a disposition to go into the fight determined to win.

Organization of a Soldiers' and Sailors' Campaign Club in the Seventh Assembly District—Resolutions and Speeches.

The soldiers and sailors residing in the Seventh Assembly District, met last evening at No. 750 Broadway, for the purpose of organizing a Woodford Campaign Club. There was a large attendance of the boys in blue, and the proceedings were harmonious and enthusiastic.

Col. A. J. H. DUGANNE called the assembly to order, and, after stating the object of the gathering, nominated Gen. ROBERT AVERY as temporary chairman, which nomination was agreed to.

Gen. AVERY thanked the meeting for the honor conferred on him, and urged unity of action among them as a sure means of success.

Lieut. HILTON was elected as temporary secretary.

Col. DUGANNE then offered the following resolutions, which were adopted nem. con.:

Resolved, That the soldiers and sailors of the Seventh Assembly District do hereby organize a club, under the title of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Central Association, for campaign service, to be called the Woodford Soldiers' Club No. 7.

Resolved, That the nomination of a good soldier as the standard-bearer of the Republican Party in the Empire State is hailed by the soldiers of New-York as a fitting recognition of the men who periled their lives in defense of the Union.

Resolved, That the comrades in battle of STEWART L. WOODFORD will rally to his support in civil life, and march shoulder to shoulder in this campaign, until we reach, with our leader, the capital at Albany.

Resolved, That we indorse the platforms of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Republican Conventions at Saratoga, as we indorse the Administration of President GRANT at Washington, and will support them with fidelity and determination, which are the best assurance of victory.

Resolved, That the soldiers and sailors of the Seventh Assembly District, New-York, propose to work from this time forth, to the close of the election, with a united resolution to secure, if it is possible for men to do it, an honest vote, and an honest count for every candidate in nomination.

A committee was then appointed to nominate permanent officers. While this Committee was out, Col. W. S. FOOR, being called upon, addressed the meeting. He reviewed the course pursued by Gov. HOFFMAN since his elevation to the chief magistracy of the State, summing up his commendable acts as Governor by remarking that he had hanged JOHN REAL.

The Committee on Nominations then reported, through Col. DUGANNE, the following-named gentlemen as permanent officers of the Club, all of whom were elected unanimously by acclamation:

President, Brigadier-Gen. ROBERT AVERY; Vice-Presidents, Lieut.-Col. George E. Hall, Col. Walter S. Poor, Private Arch. Wind; Recording Secretary, Sergt. John A. Ruffner; Corresponding Secretary, Major Thomas Elliot; Treasurer, Capt. Jno. S. Dingwall; Sergeant-at-Arms, Private John Jeffries.

Col. DUGANNE addressed the meeting briefly. It had been insinuated, he said, that it was the intention of the soldiers to carry the coming election by force. He could assure all who heard him that if force were necessary to prevent repeating at the polls, it would be used—under the sanction of the law, in all cases—but that no force would ever be used, with their sanction, to interfere with the rights of any honest Democratic voter. The soldiers would simply repel violence, if it be attempted, in defense of law. The men who bared their breasts to the enemy in defense of the Union, would unflinchingly oppose themselves to roughs and repeaters, if necessary, in defense of the purity of the ballot-box. What they wanted was peace, but not that peace which is apathy and will degenerate into slavishness. He counseled union and harmony in the ranks, and a determination to use every honest effort to achieve success, which he believed would be theirs in November next.

The meeting then adjourned until Monday evening next.

Soldiers' and Sailors' Central Committee—The Republican Nominations Indorsed.

A meeting of the delegates to the Central Committee of Soldiers and Sailors was held last evening at Room No. 24 Cooper Institute, Gen. H. E. DAVIES Jr., presiding. No business of importance was transacted, it having been previously announced that the business anticipated would not be brought up till Friday evening next.

The following resolutions, presented by Col. BULLARD, were unanimously adopted, after which the Committee adjourned to meet on Friday evening next, at the same place:

Resolved, That we recognise in the action of the late Republican Convention at Saratoga a determined purpose to maintain and support the fundamental principles of republican institutions, in its full, loyal and patriotic endorsement of the Administration of Gen. GRANT, and we cordially accept the nomination of STEWART L. WOODFORD to the office of Governor, as the highest evidence that this glorious State will, by a large majority, confirm their choice, in the remembrance of the services of the 400,000 soldiers that marched to the front from this State, to battle in the late great struggle for national existance.

Resolved, That the nomination of SIGISMUND KAUFMAN to the office of Lieutenant-Governor by the late Republican Convention, at Saratoga, meets the hearty approval of the soldiers and sailors of this State as eminently wise, sagacious and proper, in recognising the merits and services of a distinguished German, who, in common with his countrymen, aided in the field as well as in council to maintain our grand Republic against all our foes from within or without.

Resolved, That we believe a proper Republican Government should secure to each individual the greatest possible liberty consistent with justice to others and good order. We therefore deprecate and condemn the many acts of special legislation with which this State has been burdened by the Democratic Party, as infringing upon the rights and liberties of the masses by creating powerful monopolies, invested with great and valuable privileges, which have been and are now used by the unscrupulous men controlling them to deprive the people of their just prerogatives and usurp the permanent control of the Government.

Resolved, That we as soldiers who aided to put down, by force of arms, the great and terrible monopoly of slavery, for the preservation of republican institutions, are opposed and discountenance all political monopolies created by legislation or otherwise, and to this end we pledge ourselves to use all lawful means to secure to every citizen a single vote when he is entitled to it, and but one; and we pronounce as enemies to our Republic all men who attempt by repeating at the polls to obtain power and office through fraud and corruption.

Resolved, As the Germans are making common cause with the soldiers and sailors in this campaign, that the Clubs represented in the Committee will be known as the Woodford and Kaufman Soldiers' and Sailors' Club.

More Woodford and Kaufman Clubs.

At a meeting of the Woodford and Kaufman Campaign Club of the Sixth Assembly District, held at their rooms, No. 451 Grand-street, last evening, the following gentlemen were elected officers: HUGH NESBITT, President; FRANCIS SNYDER and STEPHEN HOLDEN, Vice-Presidents; ISAAC M. LAWRENCE and WILLIAM GRAHAM, Secretaries; JOHN H. DUBENBERRY, Treasurer.

At a meeting of the Republicans of the Twentieth Assembly District, last Saturday evening, a Woodford and Kaufman Campaign Club was organized by the election of JAMES OWENS, Esq., as President; CHRISTIAN BONWARTZ and GEO. P. MCCARTY as Vice-Presidents; M. C. LEE as Secretary, and WALTER S. PINCKNEY as Treasurer.

At a meeting of the Republicans of the Ninth Assembly District, Saturday night, a Woodford and Kaufman Club was organized, with the following officers: GEORGE LAYLAND, President; EDWARD TAYLOR and THOMAS COPPINS, Jr., Vice-Presidents; SAMUEL B. LAKE and HENRY C. PETTY, Secretaries, and JAMES W. FARR, Treasurer.

Eighteenth Assembly District Republican Association.

The Eighteenth Assembly District Republican Association met last evening in No. 453 Fourth-avenue, and after listening to an address by Col. KELLY, the delegate to the State Convention, indorsed the nominations of that body, and adopted its platform and resolutions. Thirty new members were admitted and twenty-five propositions for membership were received. A committee, consisting of Messrs. STANBURY, COACHMON and KELLY, was appointed to nominate inspectors of election, and a committee of fifteen was appointed, also, to organize Woodford and Kaufman Campaign Clubs in the district.

NEW-YORK STATE.

The Congressional Districts—Nominations Made and to be Made—The Prospects.

ELEVENTH DISTRICT.—In the Eleventh Congressional District ED. M. MADDEN, it is said, will be likely to receive the Republican nomination, instead of GEN. VAN WYCK. Mr. GEO. W. GREEN will probably be nominated by the Democracy.

TWELFTH DISTRICT.—JOHN H. KETCHAM, the Republican candidate for Congress in the Twelfth District, will probably be re-elected.

FIFTEENTH DISTRICT.—J. L. DAVIS is strongly urged for the Republican Congressional nomination in the Fifteenth District by the Rensselaer delegates, but he is not favored generally in the district.

SIXTEENTH DISTRICT.—The Republicans are divided in the Sixteenth District, and unless they can afford to work together a Democratic triumph will be the result.

SEVENTEENTH DISTRICT.—W. A. WHEELER is the nominee of the Republicans in the Seventeenth Congressional District.

EIGHTEENTH DISTRICT.—Mr. HATHORN, of Saratoga, will probably be the successful Republican candidate for Congress in the Eighteenth District. The differences which have heretofore operated against the success of the party in this district are being healed.

NINETEENTH DISTRICT.—In the Nineteenth Congressional District E. H. PRINDLE will probably be the Republican candidate.

TWENTIETH DISTRICT.—In the Twentieth District C. L. MERRIAM and L. M. BAGLEY are looking for the Republican nomination. There is danger of a split, but it is to be hoped matters may be arranged before it is too late.

TWENTY-FIRST DISTRICT.—E. H. ROBERTS, of the Utica Herald, is favorably spoken of in connection with the Republican nomination in the Twenty-first District. ALEX. H. BAILEY is the present representative.

TWENTY-SECOND DISTRICT.—In the Twenty-second District it seems that JOHN C. CHURCHILL is to be succeeded by Gen. LANSING as the Republican candidate.

TWENTY-THIRD DISTRICT.—In the Twenty-third District R. H. DUELL has been put forward by his friends for the Republican nomination. DENNIS MCCARTHY, the present Representative, may probably be renominated.

TWENTY-SIXTH DISTRICT.—GILES W. HOTCHKISS, the present Representative from the Twenty-sixth Congressional District, will probably be renominated by the Republicans. Mr. M. GOODRICH, of Dryden, is a candidate.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DISTRICT.—In the Twenty-seventh District W. B. SMITH and Ex-Senator HATT are candidates for the Republican nomination. HAMILTON WARD, the present incumbent, expects to be renominated.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DISTRICT.—Two nominations are to be made in the Twenty-eighth Congressional District—one to fill the unexpired term of Hon. NOAH DAVIS, and another for the full term.

THIRTIETH DISTRICT.—There will be a lively contest in the Thirtieth District. The Republicans expect to elect their man, to succeed Mr. D. S. BENNETT, the present Representative, who is a Democrat.

THIRTY-FIRST DISTRICT.—The Thirty-first District is in doubt. The present Representative is PORTER SHELDON, a Republican, but, as there are other gentlemen ambitious for the seat, he may not be renominated.

WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Formal Acceptance of the Nomination of the Labor Reform Party.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—WENDELL PHILLIPS accepts the Labor Reform nomination for Governor, in the following letter:

"I have no wish to be Governor of Massachusetts, and the flattering as is this confidence, I thoroughly dislike to have my name drawn into party politics, for I belong to no political party. But I see nothing in your platform from which I dissent, and the struggle which underlies your movement has my fullest and heartiest sympathy. Capital and labor are partners, not enemies. They stand face to face in order to bring about a fair division of the common profit. I am fully convinced that hitherto legislation has leaned too much—leaned most unfairly, to the side of capital. Hereafter we should be impartial, the law should do all it could to give the masses more leisure, a more complete education, better opportunities and a fair share of profits. It is a shame to our christianity and civilization for our social system to provide and expect that one man at seventy years of age should be lord of many thousands of dollars, while hundreds of other men, who have made as good use of their time and opportunities, lean on charity for their daily bread. Of course there must be irregularities, but the best minds and hearts of the land should give themselves to the work of changing this gross injustice, this appalling inequality. I feel sure that the readiest way to turn public thought and effort into this channel is for the working men to organize a political party. No social question ever gets fearlessly treated here till we make politics turn on it. The real American college is the ballot-box, and on questions like these a political party is the surest and readiest, if not the only way, to stir discussion and secure improvement. If my name will strengthen your movement, you are welcome to it. Allow me to add, though working for a large vote, if we fail, we should not be discouraged by a small one. Last year's experience shows our strength, and the anti-slavery movement proves how quickly a correct principle wins assent if earnest men work for it.

Yours truly,
(Signed,) WENDELL PHILLIPS.

GENERAL NOTES.

J. P. MCCOLLUM, of Montrose, Susquehanna County, has been nominated for Congress by the Democrats of the Eighth Pennsylvania District.

The Republican majority in Vermont is estimated, from the returns so far received, to be 22,000.

ENEAS FITZPATRICK, of Hudson City, N. J., has been put in nomination for Congress by a portion of the delegates to the late Democratic Convention.

Mr. STEPHEN J. JACKSON, of Rockaway, Morris County, announces himself as an independent candidate for Congress in the Fourth District. The Newark Courier doesn't know the gentleman.

A telegram has been received at Rock Island from P. L. CABLE, who is now visiting in Scotland, accepting the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Fourth District of Illinois.

The Lebanon (Penn.) Courier says RICHARD J. HALDEMAN is to be the Democratic candidate for Congress in the York District after all. The Democracy did not want him, but he presented arguments in behalf of his nomination that were irresistible.

The statement that at the city election in Wilmington, Del., the whole Democratic ticket was elected is corrected by later returns. The Republicans elected the City Treasurer, and carried five wards out of nine. The President of the City Council, a Democrat, was elected on a local issue.

The Pittsburg Commercial says: "Mr. TAYLOR having declined the canvass for Congress in the Twenty-first Congressional District, the conferees reassembledin the city yesterday, and placed in nomination Hon. ANDREW STEWART, of Uniontown. It is understood that Mr. STEWART will accept, and, so far as possible, give the canvass his personal attention."

CORNELIUS WALSH, of Newark, having been mentioned as the probable nominee of the Democracy for United States Senator from New-Jersey, the Newark Journal says: "Hold on there. CORNELIUS has not yet joined the Democratic campaign club in his ward, nor made his confession of a sound political faith. He is quite a clever fellow, and if he comes into the Democratic Party we are satisfied that it will be a square conversion."

"In the Fifth (New-Jersey) District," says the Newark Advertiser, "the nomination will probably lie between Gen. HALSTEAD and MATTHEW ARMSTRONG. The former gentleman is better known in Newark, where the Republican majority must come from, and from his extensive business connections and personal charities has many friends outside of the party ranks. Mr. ARMSTRONG is better known in Hudson through his large charities and estimable character."

The Detroit Tribune says that three successive Democratic County Treasurers in Hancock County, Ohio, have proved defaulters, the last one having just absconded, his accounts showing a defalcation of over $30,000. In the same county the last Democratic Sheriff was a defaulter in the amount of $8,000. Doubtless, the Democrats of Hancock County affect to be incensed at the alleged corruption of the Republican Party.

To-morrow, 14th inst., the Labor Reform Party will meet in Convention at Saratoga. The Democratic State Convention will assemble at Nashville, Tenn. A Republican County Convention, to nominate candidates for County Clerk, Sheriff, and other officers, will be held at Canton, in this State. A Congressional Convention will be held in the Third District of Michigan, and the Democrats of Illinois will hold their State Convention at Springfield.

On the 15th inst. the Democrats of the Second Minnesota Congressional District will assemble in Convention at St. Paul and nominate a candidate. The Democrats will nominate a candidate from the Fifth Maryland Congressional District. One member of the State Board of Equalization will be nominated at Toledo, Ohio. The Republicans of the Fifth New-Jersey Congressional District will nominate a candidate at Bergen City. The Democrats in the Fourth Maryland Congressional District will nominate a candidate at Frederick City. The Democrats will nominate a candidate for Congress in the Fifth District of the same State.

The Philadelphia Press says: "In the Nineteenth District of this State, now represented by Hon. GLENNI W. SCOFIELD, who has been renominated for another term, a disorganising element is at work, headed by MORROW B. LOWRY. Notwithstanding that the conferees of every county in the district voted unanimously for the renomination of Judge SCOFIELD, and that the people of the district cordially indorsed their action, Mr. LOWRY is actively at work endeavoring to foist himself upon the party as an independent candidate. His efforts to secure the support of the colored voters have met with a stern rebuke from their two leading men in the district.

MAINE.

The State Election—The Returns from Various Towns—Prospect of a Great Republican Victory.

LEWISTON, Me., Sept. 12—Noon.—The vote of Lewiston, up to this hour, is larger than last year. The Democrats are bringing out every voter. The Republicans generally support PERHAM for Governor, and FRYE for Congress, but are much divided on the State Senator and Representatives to the Legislature. The Chamberlain Republicans are, to a great extent, voting for the Democratic candidate for State Senator. In Auburn, the Democrats, the Chamberlain Republicans and Labor Reformers generally unite on a candidate or Representative opposed to the Republican candidate.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 12.—Lewiston gives Roberts, (Democratic,) for Governor, 76 majority, and elects two Democratic Representatives. Auburn gives Perham, (Republican,) 102 majority, and elects Republican Representatives.

Portland gives Perham 2,153, Roberts 1,724, against last year's Chamberlain (Rep.) 1,814, Smith (Dem.) 868, and Hitchman (Temperance) 139.

Westbrook gives Perham 267, Roberts 540, against last year's Chamberlain 370, Smith 338, Hitchman 35.

Bethel gives Perham 224, Roberts 223—against, last year's, Chamberlain, 234; Smith, 110; Hitchman, 14.

Gorham gives Perham 356, Roberts 240—against, last year's, Chamberlain, 380; Smith, 291; Hitchman, 17.

Six towns sum up: Perham, 4,89; Roberts, 3,297, against Chamberlain last year, 3,363; Smith, 2,188; Hitchman, 236—being 772 Republican majority against 939 last year, a net loss of 167, or about one-fifth.

Rockland gives Perham, 630; Roberts, 390—a gain of 162 over the Republican majority of last year. The Democrats have probably elected the county ticket by a small majority.

All but four towns in Androscoggin give Perham, (Rep.,) 2,317, and Roberts, (Dem.,) 2,067. Last year the same towns gave Chamberlain 2,189, Hitchborn 481 and Smith 1,475. In these towns Garcelon, (Chamberlain, Dem.,) has 134 majority over Holland, (Morrill, Rep.) Remaining towns gave Roberts 209 (Rep.) majority last year. Six Republican representatives favoring Morrill for United States Senator, and two Democrats are elected. One hundred and ten towns give Perham (Rep.) 23,769, Roberts (Dem.) 18,669; Republican majority, 5,000; against last year, Chamberlain, (Rep.,) 23,167; Smith, (Dem.,) 15,884; Hitchborn, (Temperance,) 2,391; Republican majority then, 4,942; showing that the Republicans will hold their own. Lynch is undoubtedly elected in the First, which was the only doubtful district.

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 12.—The election in this city passed off very quietly. The result exceeds the anticipation of the most sanguine Democrats or fearful Republicans. Gen. ROBERTS and MARCELLUS EMERY are the first Democrats who ever received a majority of votes in this city for the offices of Governor and Representative to Congress. Though the city is lost the Republican county ticket is undoubtedly elected in full. The Democrats had a jollification meeting this evening.

The following towns are given, with gains estimated by taking last year's majority over both candidates. The temperance vote, however, is practically added to the Republican vote this year:

Waldsboro—Perham, 180; Roberts, 610. Democratic gain, 207.

Bangor—Perham, 1,074; Roberts, 1,675. Democratic gain, 967.

Bucksport—Perham, 297; Roberts, 283. Democratic gain, 4.

Orono—Perham, 243; Roberts, 138. Democratic gain, 15.

Brewer—Perham, 252; Roberts, 108. Democratic gain, 86.

Hampden—Perham, 291; Roberts, 233. Republican gain, 26.

Calais—Perham, 434; Roberts, 170. Republican gain, 73.

Pembroke—Perham, 164; Roberts, 163. Democratic gain, 59.

Wescosset—Perham, 176; Roberts, 231. Democratic gain, 33.

Waterville—Perham, 538; Roberts, 239. Last years' Republican, 289; Democratic, 205; Temperance, 159.

Polond—Perham, 250; Roberts, 196. Republican gain, 10.

Paris—Perham, 347; Roberts, 254; last year, Rep., 307; Dem., 159; Temperance, 28. Democratic gain, 32.

Winthrop—Perham, 207; Roberts, 195; Rep. gain, 80.

Farmington—Perham, 405; Roberts, 340; Rep. gain, 71.

Wilton—Perham, 214; Roberts, 99. Republican gain, 40.

Lewiston—Perham, 623; Roberts, 699. Democratic gain, 408.

Norway—Perham, 236; Roberts, 160. Republican gain, 14.

Greenwood—Perham, 68; Roberts, 113. Democratic gain, 30.

New-Gloucester—Perham, 172; Roberts, 118. Democratic gain, 35.

Cape Elizabeth—Perham, 307; Roberts, 223. Last year—Republican, 234; Democratic, 190; Temperance, 6.

Buxton—Perham, 316; Roberts, 325. Democratic gain, 30.

Slowhegan—Perham, 401; Roberts, 106. Republican gain.

Belfast—Perham, 404; Roberts, 328. Democratic gain, 26.

Winterport—Perham, 332; Roberts, 158. Democratic gain, 98.

Camden—Perham, 393; Roberts, 379; Democratic gain, 7.

Thomaston—Perham, 117; Roberts, 355; Democratic gain, 34.

Biddeford—Perham, 625; Roberts, 926; Democratic gain, —.

Biddeford, the home of Haines, Democratic candidate for Congress from the First District, gave, last year, Republican, 499; Democratic, 666; Temperance, 41. Saco, —, 658; 206 last year; Republican, 483; Democrat, 247; Temperance, 36.

Returns from 115 towns give Perham 25,431, and Roberts 20,189, against, last year, Chamberlain, 24,849; Smith, (Dem.,) 17,049; Hinchborn, (Temperance,) 2,493. The Republican majority this year, 5,242, against 5,077 last year.

The temperance vote is mostly added to the Republican vote this year, by means of which their majority is slightly increased.

The towns not heard from gave last year Chamberlain, 24,135; Smith, 22,349; Hinchborn, 2,495; Republican majority, 1,291; so that Perham should at least have 6,533 majority. Last year the Republican over both was 6,368. There is an increased total vote in the towns heard from of 1,400. The aggregate vote last year was 95,200. In the First District, we hear from twenty-eight towns, giving a majority of 1,271 for Lynch—a loss of about 600 from the vote of 1868. The towns to be heard from gave in 1868 a majority of 400. The estimated majority is about 1,500. His majority in 1868 was 2,189. The other district will also go up by a larger majority than this. The Legislature will probably be a trifle more Democratic than last year, and the Democrats have perhaps, carried three counties instead of two as last year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Tenth Assembly District Republican Association—Complaints from Inspectors Concerning Regulations at the Mayor's Office.

The Tenth Assembly District Republican Association held a special meeting last evening at the corner of Stanton and Chrystie streets, JACOB M. PATTERSON, Jr., President, in the chair.

The delegates to the Saratoga Convention reported their action there, especially as it related to the question of contested delegations. Mr. PATTERSON, the President, and one of the delegates, stated that the point they made in the Convention at Saratoga was one purely of regularity, they claiming that the former President, Mr. KNAPP, and his adherents, had been expelled the Association of the district, and that their delegation could be alone recognized as regular. After his statement of the case the delegates, he said, retired from the Convention, and in a few minutes they had the pleasure of being informed that they were recognised as the regular delegates. He did not mean is to be understood that Mr. KNAPP was charged with appropriating the money to his own use—none would think of charging that—the only charge was that he had not used it for the purpose directed by the Association. One good at least had been the result of the decimon of the General Convention. It had set at rest all dispute as to who were the recognised representatives of the party in the district.

Resolutions were read, approving the State nominations, and appointing a committee on patronage; also a committee to revise the roll of membership of the Association.

A further resolution was passed, resolving the Association into a Woodford and Kaufman Club.

Some of the appointed inspectors of elections reported that, after receiving notice of their appointment, they went to the Mayor's office to have their names registered and be sworn in. They found a young man, who told them he had charge of the business, but that it was too soon; they had better come down again in a few days. In a few days they went down again, and were then told it was too late. It was generally agreed that this matter should be looked after.

After the adjournment of the Association, the campaign Club was organized by the election of LOUIS J. KIRK as President, DANIEL S. RIDDLE, First Vice-President; CHARLES L. CROFERT, Second Vice-President; WILLIAM GLASER and SHERMAN SUSSMAN, Secretaries, and WALTER S. HILL, Treasurer.

A Finance Committee, consisting of five, and an Executive Committee, consisting of twenty, were also appointed, after which the meeting adjourned.

Delegates to the Fifth District New-Jersey Republican Convention.

The primary ward meetings to elect delegates to attend the Republican Congressional Convention for the Fifth District of New-Jersey, to be held at Bergen City, Thursday, were held in Newark last night. Eighty-seven delegates were chosen, and will go to the Convention not pledged to any particular candidate, but ready to vote for the man who shall seem to be the choice of the Convention Several names have been mentioned as candidates, though none are urged either by the gentlemen themselves or by their friends. Ex-Senator FRELIGHUYSEN would no doubt have been the choice of perhaps a majority, but he has declined having his name mentioned in connection with the office. Among other names mentioned are Ex-Gov. WARD, Hon. GEO. O. HALSEY, Major RECORD, MATTHEW ARMSTRONG, and perhaps others. These names are not mentioned by consent of the gentlemen, but merely as the choice of the men who bring them forward.

The Contest for the County Clerkship.

Another demonstration in favor of Hon. CHARLES E. LOEW for County Clerk took place Saturday evening at Busam's Hall, m Second-street. A "Charles E. Loew Campaign Club" was organized, and $3,000 immediately subscribed toward defraying election expenses. The meeting was addressed by Hon. HERVEY C. CALKINS, M. C., Hon. Justice KOCH, Hon. HENRY WOLTMAN and Hon. WM. GOVER, the nominee for Coroner, who was loudly cheered, and is evidently a favorite with the Germans. Resolutions laudatory of Mr. LOEW, recognising his honesty and efficiency since he has been in office, were passed.

GENERAL TELEGRAMS.

ITALY AND THE POPE.

Outbreaks Among the People—A Vote to be Taken on the Occupation of the Papal Territory—The King Urged to Make Rome the Capital.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—An outbreak is reported in the Province of Viterbo. The people surrounded the Papal Zouaves in their intrenchments at Viterbo, Montefiascone, and Valentano, and threatened to attack them. Order was restored in the name of the King of Italy.....The Daily Telegraph has a special dispatch, stating that an arrangement for the occupation of the Papal territory has been agreed to. A plebiscitum is to be taken, by which the inhabitants are to decide for Pope or King as their civil ruler, the decision to be binding on both. In the meantime the Italian troops will hold the Roman territory until the voting is over, and if the result is adverse to the King, will withdraw..... The papal towns are sending petitions to the Italian Government for protection. Naples urges the King not to hesitate to make Rome the capital of the nation. The official journal of the Government at Florence justifies the occupation of the patrimony of St. Peter, maintaining that it is as necessary for the Pope as for Italy. The journal hopes the Pontiff will accept the guardianship of the Italian Government.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Advices from Florence are to the effect that the Italian troops enter Roman territory today. Italy's ultimatum substantially strips the Pope of his temporal power. The local authority of Italian territory, however, remains undisturbed by the Italians, and the Government announces its wish to concur with any Power in guaranteeing the independence of the Pontiff.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

Further Accounts of the Loss of the Captain—Other Marine Disasters—A New Atlantic Cable Projected—Portuguese Affairs.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Her Majesty's steamship Inconstant brings news of the loss of the Captain. She reports that the Captain, before sailing, narrowly escaped destruction by fire. The packing of her feed-pipe ignited, and the fire had made considerable progress before it was discovered. It was extinguished with difficulty. During the gale one of her heavy guns got loosened from its fastenings in consequence of the tremendous rolling of the ship, and, suddenly swinging around, struck a gunner, killing him instantly. The Shipping Gazette demands a strict investigation. The British public should know how one of the staunchest vessels afloat foundered in weather which a collier might have outlived.....No tidings have been received of the ship wrecked last week on Goodwin Sands. Her cargo consisted of tobacco..... The Juana, bound from Bordeaux for Havana with a general cargo, took fire at sea and was scuttled.....A project for laying another telegraph cable to America is announced.

LISBON, Sept. 12.—

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

This week opens dull, so far as appearances at the Exchange indicated, yesterday. There were no sales, although the number of dealers assembled in the salesroom was far in excess of the crowds brought together during any day last week; a fact which shows that an increased interest is being taken in the state of the market, and that dealers are on the lookout for any chances that may offer. The bulletin boards, yesterday, contained no notices of offerings to be made today; but on Wednesday and Thursday next, unless holders adjourn the sales, there will be offered very desirable city property, located both in New-York and Brooklyn. Messrs. A. J. BLEECKER, SON & Co. will sell improved property on Wednesday, situated in Tompkins-avenue, between Halsey and Hancock streets, Brooklyn. On Thursday, the same firm will dispose of improved property on Forty-sixth-street, near Fifth-avenue, in this City; Mr. B.P. FAIRCHILD, for V. K. STEVENSON, SON & Co., will offer vacant lots on Fifty-first-street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues—now become desirable in consequence of the fact that the street has been sewered, and is about to be paved with Belgian pavement. Mr. ADRIAN H. MULLER, of MULLER, WILKINS & CO., has advertised to be sold, on the same day, valuable leasehold property on Duane and Reade streets, between Broadway and Church streets. Both lots have marble front stores thereon. It is anticipated that for all these offerings bidding will be brisk.

8 per Cent. Interest

FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.

Principal and Interest Payable in Gold.

The First Mortgage Eight Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY RAILROAD COMPANY are for sale by the undersigned. Price, 97½ and Interest. The amount of Bonds issued is $1,800,000 on 111 miles of road, of which 80 miles are completed, and the grading of the balance finished, while the iron and materials are on the track to complete it.
This road, completed and about being finished, together with rolling-stock, lands, property of every description, and franchise, is mortgaged to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company in trust for the security of these bonds. This property has a value more than double the amount of this mortgage. The net earnings of the Company are constantly on the increase, and are in excess of the amount required to pay the interest on these bonds. The payment of the interest and principal is therefore fully secured. The bonds are in denominations of $1,000 and $500. Interest payable semi-annually in New-York, London or Frankfort on the Main. We unhesitatingly recommend them, and will furnish maps and pamphlets upon application.

THE FRENCH REPUBLIC.

Immense Demonstration at the Cooper Institute.

The Hall Crowded to Overflowing—Strong Resolutions—Addresses by Daniel R. Lyddy, Gen. McMahon, William E. Robinson and Others—Great Enthusiasm.

Last evening an immense meeting, mostly composed of Irishmen, was held in the large hall of the Cooper Institute to give an expression of sympathy with the young Republic of France. Long before the hour appointed for the opening of the meeting an enormous mass of people filled all the seats and avenues in the hall, and when the chair was taken there was not a single inch of ground that did not contain an occupant. So great was the crowd that sought admittance that a great number had to remain outside, where they erected a temporary platform, and speeches were made and national anthems sung. A German band was engaged to perform at intervals during the proceedings, but on its refusing to render the "Marseillaise," at the vociferous call of the whole meeting, it was compelled to leave, but was permitted to withdraw without any serious manifestation. M. DESCHAMPS, a Frenchman, sang the "Marseillaise" amid the most unbounded applause, which was again and again renewed. The whole proceedings were very enthusiastic, and terminated without the occurrence of any circumstance that would reflect discreditably on the purpose for which the assemblage was convened. At about 8 o'clock, Mr. DANIEL R. LYDDY, of the Irish Republic, was called to the chair.

Letters were read from JOHN MITCHEL and others, regretting their inability to attend, but expressing their sympathy with the object of the meeting.

ADDRESS OF MR. LYDDY.

The Chairman, in opening the meeting, said: This great meeting of the Irish citizens of New-York is assembled to rejoice at the establishment of a republican form of government by our true and old friends, the people of France. CARLYLE says that friendship, in the old heroic sense, is no longer to be found in the world. Not, perhaps, in his world of English selfishness and Scotch metaphysics. The crabbed philosopher seems to be entirely unacquainted with the higher phases of Irish character and with the whole impulse of the Celtic heart. Friendship is the growth of intimate and honorable relations. Gratitude is its hand-maiden; you must not confound it with the whining thanks of the mendicant; it is the most royal offering of the soul, the very flower of true manhood. Men are something more than animated machines, and despite the materia and utilitarian philosophies of time, gratitude is still a heroic necessity, not so much for our friends as for ourselves, that we may preserve the entirety of our moral natures, the honor of our country, and the dignity of our own manhood. What America is to-day to Ireland, the home and refuge of her expatriated sons, France was, two centuries ago, and up to the era of the American Revolution. If the conditions of the present times changed, and America a century or two hence, under natural laws, should cease to receive the sons of Ireland, and should make possible the engine of liberty and peace in the world—the universal republic. The Germans have made passing material success; let them crown it with the nobler and higher moral triumph of destroying the last remnants of feudalism and kingcraft, and declare Germany a republic. For France I have no fears. Her history justifies my confidence. She has thrice essayed a republic; it was heretofore impossible. The soul and genius of France, ambitioning too much, sought too ample a success, and tried to solve all difficulties and realize the ideal state. France tried to solve the social as well as the political problems. It was too soon. Our Republic has only resolved the political problem. The world moves slowly; it is not yet ready for the solution of the social question. At this solemn hour in the destiny of France, when invading armies pollute her soil, and, amid the travail of freedom, red war's grim spirit has seized for its prey her noblest son, we mourn him, for he was alike the child of Ireland and of France. Two nations owned him, and two peoples bend in sorrow o'er his grave. The Celtic race has had no poverty of heroic sons; but amid the brilliant host of brave and patriotic men who drew their swords in defense of gallant France, there was none whose war record is brighter nor whose heritage of glory is more highly prized by his country than Marshal MCMAHON; and he has fallen, his deeds roll filled with glory, and his face to the foe. On the dull, cold earth, which holds the dead hero, fall tears of loving remembrance, and in the ages still yearning for birth in the womb of time, sires will take their sons, and at his grave, and from his story, teach the lesson of the patriot soldier's life—how to save one's country. For the great services he has done France—thanks him, and you and I are proud of these services, for he was of your race, and his undying fame reflects much of his lustre upon you. From beneath the thrall of imperialism France has escaped even by the hands of a foreign invading horde, and the sympathy which so instantly arises in the breasts of Irishmen for the sister Republic should no longer chilled by the shadow cast from the Bonapartian throne. Sharing now the cheer and warmth which a republican sun sheds on the land of the gallant and fiery Frank, our racial predilections for that noble race find legitimate, unrestrained expression; while as citizens of this democratic republic, we unfeignedly rejoice at the new birth of liberty, and with all our souls welcome the land of LAFAYETTE into the brotherhood of free nations.

The Chairman was loudly cheered during the delivery of his address.

ADDRESS OF GEN. M'MAHON.

Gen. M. T. MCMAHON, late U. S. Minister to Paraguay, then addressed the meeting. He considered that on the subject of the French Republic there could be but one sentiment, a sentiment of glad and earnest sympathy, particularly among all classes of American citizens. No event of the present century was so significant as that which they were met that night to celebrate, to all nations, but especially to those nations among those that have waited, through weary centuries of oppression, watching for the light that has dawned at length in the very heart of Europe. A republic in France not born of the barricades nor baptized in the blood of its citizens flowing in civil strife, sets forth to the world the promise of a speedy fulfillment of the glorious future projected for humanity, when these united columns declared and established their independence. [Cheers.] The hopes of all the lovers of liberty were now centred in France. She will do for the Continent of Europe what the United States has done for this, not by warfare and oppression, but by moral force and example. On this broad Continent there existed today but one single emblem of monarchical servitude: in fifty years from today the same might be said of Europe. There were those, it was true, of little faith, who feared, or affected to believe, that the Republic will go down as suddenly as it arose; that the treachery of leaders, or the intrigues of royal houses, when the storm of war had passed, would render its existence an impossibility. He shared not in these apprehensions, but even if these timorous predictions were proved to be true, the effect of the great example will remain forever with the people, and in the hour of supreme peril will arise in their might, and the nation will again be triumphant. [Applause.] In this denial of the "divine right of Kings," there was hope for them, whatever may be the future of France, and they might reasonably hope that her career shall be as rapidly prosperous, and as glorious, and as permanent, as our own. Far from looking for the failure of the Republic, he was prepared to welcome and rejoice in its birth, for the flame that has been kindled in Paris will light up by reflection the sacred shrines of liberty, almost deserted, in other lands. It will give hope and courage to the patient watcher in Ireland, [applause,] and strengthen the heart and the hand of the fighting patriot in Cuba. [Cheers.] The right of the people to govern themselves was not banished by disuse from the face of Europe. France had proclaimed it, and monarchies should receive and listen and be warned of what is to follow, and he advised the Government of the United States not to play the detective, as it had done for the tyrant monarchies of Europe in the suppression of freedom. He trusted that the cause of Cuba, which was identical with that of France and Ireland, may not be overlooked. [Cheers.] Why should not a republic be recognized in Cuba as well as in France? [Cheers.] The time may be at hand when they should have to demand for Ireland what was denied to Cuba. [Great applause.] Gen. MCMAHON proceeded at further length to argue on the necessity of our Government recognizing Cuban belligerency, and continued to say that the cause of republican liberty was the same all the world over. [Cheer-.] Germans, Frenchmen and Irishmen who testified their love for liberty by seeking the shores of the United States, their lot for better or for worse with the free people of America, they should advocate the right of men to govern themselves and nations to make their own destiny. [Cheers.] The General concluded by calling for the sympathy of the American people for their republican brothers in expressing his conviction in the ultimate triumph of the Republic.

Mr. JOSEPH CLARKE next delivered an address, and read an original poem on the "French Republic," written for the occasion, which was received with great applause.

ADDRESS OF MR. ROBINSON.

Hon. WILLIAM E. ROBINSON was the next speaker. He remarked that it might have been excusable in American citizens up to the present time to hesitate as to what side they were to take in the great European contest, but now that the Empire was dead it would be criminal to hesitate for a moment, and he was no republican by sympathies with King WILLIAM. He called to mind the conduct of the German people in 1848, when they foreswore allegiance to royalty, and he did not believe that any true German would revoke the principles then given on so shallow a pretense as that originating on any questions connected with the war. He refuted the utterances of American journalists in pandering to their national prejudices and pride for the mere purpose of catching their votes, and agreed with the words of the poet that the German's fatherland lay, not in principalities or kingdoms, but where the universal German tongue was spoken. Was it their destiny to follow forever the footsteps of a tyrant and keep time to the music of a despot? Wherever oppression was to be laid low, and wherever the Germans raised their heads, there was their fatherland. With all the reverses which had befallen France he still believed her prospects were good. Strasbourg and the Cathedral is in ruins. BAZAINE gallantly held Metz, and that old hero, whose ancestors were driven from Limerick by English oppression, might yet return to Paris the only French Marshal, a reinforcement as good as 100,000 fighting men. TROCHU held out, the people would hold out, and he trusted the darkest day that Paris had ever yet seen was passed, and the "full moon of freedom might beam around her yet." He longed for the dawn of universal freedom, and hoped that in the general liberation his native land, ever struggling, would have an opportunity of striking a blow for that existence as a nation which nature intended she should occupy. In conclusion, he tendered his hearty sympathy and co-operation for any movement to end the cause of the French Republic. [Cheers.]

THE RESOLUTIONS.

Addresses were also delivered by M. ARLOT, Gen. RYAN and others, after which the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

First.—Irishmen by birth and citizens of this Democratic Republic, we hail with pleasure and pride, the establishment of a Republic among our hereditary friends and allies, the people of France.

Second.—That we hail the French Republic as the pioneer in leading all the people of Europe into republican liberty, and we pledge to it our hearty sympathy and moral support.

Third.—That we have heretofore refrained through regard for the feelings of our German fellow-citizens from publicly expressing our friendship for the people of France, but we are compelled to decide and speak out without hesitation in favor of Republican liberty and against monarchical aggressions on freedom.

Fourth.—That in the name of progress and a universal republic we invite the German people to throw off the yoke of king-craft and crown their material successes by the whole higher moral success of declaring themselves a republic.

Sixth.—That we pledge to President GRANT our hearty support for any wise attempt at mediation leading to an early and honorable peace, which secures the integrity of the French Republic and the ascendency of the American Christian ideas in Europe.

Seventh.—That copies of these resolutions be sent to the President and the French Minister at Washington, for transmission to the Government. Long live the French Republic!

The meeting then dispersed, with cheers for the new Republic. Subsequently, considerable bodies of men marched through the City, bearing the tri-color, singing the Marseillaise, and shouting for the success of the French Republic.

A New Battery in the Harbor—A New Ordnance Store—Miscellaneous News.

For a long time the question of erecting a new and formidable battery on the south side of Governor's Island has been under the consideration of the War Department. Several of the most prominent officers of the Engineer Corps have been addressed on the subject, and all have agreed that such a battery was necessary for the better defense of the harbor. The department having consented, orders were sent to Gen. NEWTON to draw up plans, and finally the work was placed in the hands of Col. EGGLESTON, who commenced throwing up earth. This battery will be of very large proportions, and is to be erected on that portion of the island lying between Castle William and South Battery. The ditch surrounding will be very deep, and wider than usual. The battery will be mounted by thirty-six heavy guns, and in every respect it will be a formidable fortification. No citizens will be allowed to see the battery while in course of construction, but when finished will have the privilege of a peep at Gen. NEWTON'S work.

A NEW ORDNANCE STORE.

The accumulation of ordnance stores in this City within the past twelve months has been so great that the storage-room provided was found to be inadequate. The Secretary of War was notified of the fact, and after consideration of the subject gave orders for the construction of a new ordnance store for the Department. The plans having been accepted, the work was commenced some four weeks ago on that portion of Governor's Island facing Castle Garden. The building is plain but strongly built, the material used being red brick. It is two stories high and measures 300 feet in length by 80 in depth. It will be well lighted and will be capable of containing a large amount of war material. It will be completed and ready for the reception of ordnance stores in the course of about three months. It will be roofed in about one month.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

Bedloe's Island has been discontinued as a rendezvous for military recruits, and will be garrisoned under orders from the General commanding the Department of the East.

Two hundred recruits left this City, last evening, to join the Eleventh Infantry, at San Antonio, Texas.

Since the 1st inst. the following detachments of recruits have been forwarded from headquarters in this City: Thirty-six men to Fort McHenry, thirty-seven to Fort William, seventeen to Fort Foot and ten to Fort Macon, all to join the Second Artillery; forty-one to Fort Adams, Rhode Island; twenty-nine to Fort Independence, Boston harbor; eleven to Fort Preble, and twelve to Fort Sullivan, all to join the Fifth United States Artillery.

The resignation of First Lieutenant HOWARD STRECKTON, Ordnance Department, as Aide-de-camp to the Department Commander, has been accepted.

The following orders are the latest issued from the Department:

SPECIAL ORDERS, NO. 167.—In compliance with Special Orders No. 80, current series, Head-quarters Military Division of the Atlantic, the garrison of Fort Warren, Mass., will be withdrawn, and the work relinquished to the Engineer Department. With the view of affording the greatest comfort to the troops with the least expense to the Government, the following disposition will be made:

I. The companies will take post at Forts Independence, Mass., Adams, R. I., and Trumbull, Conn.—one at each—the choice according to the rank of the Captains.

II. An officer with twelve men of those most skilled as mechanics and most able-bodied, will be, at once, sent from each company, to the post it is to join; to be employed on extra duty by the Post Quartermaster, in fitting up the quarters to be occupied by the entire company,—including the officers and laundresses—on its arrival.

III. Major SEYMOUR is assigned to Fort Preble, in place of the Lieutenant-Colonel of the Regiment, transferred—at his own request—to Fort Trumbull. The Major will join as his convenience.

By command of Brig.-Gen. MCDOWELL.
CHAUNCEY MCKEEVER, Assistant Adjutant General. Official.

GENERAL ORDERS, NO. 11.—By direction of the General of the Army, "the cartridge belt should be worn across the shoulder, according to present pattern, until a new one is substituted," it having been reported by medical officers of the Army that the practice of supporting the cartridge-box, bayonet, &c., entirely by the waist-belt produces hematuria. "The Inspector-General of the Department will see that this regulation is enforced."

By command of Brig.-Gen. MCDOWELL.
CHAUNCEY MCKEEVER, Assistant Adjutant-General. Official.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 10.—I. Pursuant to instructions from Head-quarters Military Division of the Atlantic, the State of North Carolina will constitute, temporarily, a military district, head-quarters at Raleigh.

II. Col. H. J. HUNT, Fifth United States Artillery, is assigned to the command of the District of North Carolina, and will proceed to join his command forthwith.

By command of Brig.-Gen. MCDOWELL.
CHAUNCEY MCKEEVER, Assistant Adjutant-General. Official.

Meeting of Baptist Sunday-School Teachers.

Last evening a meeting was held of the Teachers' Association of the Baptist Sunday-school Union, at the Stanton-street Baptist Church. Among the Sunday-schools represented were those of the following churches: Antioch, Amity-street; Bethany, Madison-avenue; Fifth-avenue, and three or four others. The meeting was briefly addressed by Rev. T. EDWIN BROWN, of Rochester, N. Y., Rev. J. J. BROWNER and Mr. WILLIAMS. The latter spoke at some length of the great good which could be accomplished by Sunday-school teachers, if they were only willing to be a little self-sacrificing. He thought it was especially important that teachers should visit the homes of the children, and use all laudable means to induce scholars to attend. If necessary, they should clothe the children to enable them to attend.

One of the speakers referred to the fact that it was not the habit of Sunday-school teachers to visit the homes of the children under their care. He said he had been a Sunday-school superintendent and visitor for a long time, and therefore he spoke from individual knowledge. It was, he thought, the duty of every teacher to visit the parents of the children, and in every practicable and possible manner aid the children, and if necessary enlighten the parents. The meeting was opened by an eloquent prayer by the pastor, and closed by the singing of one of our most familiar Sunday-school hymns.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

Coroner SCHIRMER held an inquest, yesterday, in the case of HENRY M. BREESE, who committed suicide on Saturday, by hanging himself in the trunk manufactory Nos. 352 and 354 West Forty-first-street. There was no evidence to show the causes which prompted the deceased to commit the act. The jury rendered a verdict of suicide by hanging.

The Arbeiter Verein met, last night, in Stanton-street. Mr. CONRAD KUHN presided, and made a report of the proceedings of the National Labor Congress, to which he had been delegated. In his remarks he advocated the erection of a National Working Men's Building, the founding of hospitals and asylums for the benefit of working men, and the opening of libraries and reading-rooms in the same interest. A communication from the Working Men's Union asking the Arbeiter Verein's indorsement of the Working Men's Friendly Society, and its co-operation in extending its principles, was referred to a committee of three, consisting of Messrs. LENTZ, BOLDEY and BRUNNER, to report to it. After some routine business the meeting adjourned.

Mr. JAMES D. FRENCH, of Penn, Mass., when passing the restaurant of CHARLES GERET, No. 407 East Fourteenth-street, at 8 o'clock last evening, was struck in the hand and seriously wounded by a bullet which came from the restaurant. It was subsequently found that the shot had been fired by one TIMOTHY BOSSEN, who was carelessly handling a pistol, and he was arrested and locked up in the East Twenty-second-street Police Station.

A line of about 250 applicants for admission to the Cooper Union free night classes filled the office and part of the hall of that institution last evening, waiting for tickets and assignments to their respective classes. The school term opens in a couple of weeks.

The public schools reopened yesterday morning, after the Summer vacation. There was a large attendance of scholars at roll-call. All the buildings presented a neat and clean appearance, having been thoroughly repaired.

MARY JAMESON, eighty years of age, residing at No. 329 West Thirty-second-street, was knocked down, yesterday, at the corner of Tenth-avenue and Thirty-third-street, by a grocer's wagon, and seriously injured. OLIVER CARSON, the driver of the wagon, was arrested and locked up in the Twentieth Precinct Station-house for reckless driving.

HENRY MELVILLE, a member of Engine No. 9, fell from the tender, yesterday, while it was on the way to the fire announced at the corner of East Broadway and Montgomery-street, and had his leg broken. He was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

CHARLES KLUFT, a resident of Passaic, N. J., in stepping from the ferry-boat Pavonia, yesterday, at Long Dock, Jersey City, was caught between the boat and dock, and had his left foot crushed. He was brought back to the City and taken to St. Luke's Hospital.

HENRY STAMM, a German, forty years of age, committed suicide during Saturday night by hanging himself to a beam on the third floor of the pottery at Fifty-first-street and Eleventh-avenue. The body was discovered last evening and taken to the Morgue, to await the action of the Coroner.

MARY MCGRATH, a native of Ireland, fifty-three years of age, living at No. 23 Pell-street, attempted to commit suicide last evening by taking Paris green, but the dose did not have a fatal effect. She was taken to the Park Hospital.

Coroner KEENAN held an inquest, yesterday, at the Morgue on the body of an unknown man, who was found dead in the greenhouse of Mr. R. W. SHAW, in Broadway, near One Hundred and Twelfth-street, with a handkerchief tied round his neck. The jury returned a verdict accordingly.

WILLIAM MERCER was arrested, yesterday, for an attempted robbery of Room No. 524 at the Metropolitan Hotel of a carpet-bag, but was detected as he was going down-stairs. He is detained at the Spring-street Police Station.

GUSTAVE KOHL, aged fifteen years, of No. 394 Hudson-street, yesterday fell from the front platform of an Avenue C car, and was dangerously injured. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

BROOKLYN.

The members of the Brooklyn Choral Union met in large force last evening, for the first time this season, in their room at the corner of Gallatin-place and Fulton-avenue. They rehearsed several pieces. The prospects of the association for the coming Winter are more than ordinarily encouraging.

Rev. HENRY W. BEECHER will return to his pulpit on the first Sunday of October, unless something unforseen should happen to prevent it.

CHARLES REGAN was sent to the Penitentiary for four years, yesterday, by Justice TROY for breaking into the house of C. BARTON, No. 801 Pacific-street, on the 5th of July last.

THOMAS CODY, a butcher, at the corner of Amity and Columbia streets, had $335 stolen from his till yesterday afternoon by a strange woman. She had an accomplice in the person of a so-called sea captain, who attracted the attention of the unfortunate victim while she performed the operation in question. Before leaving the store, she politely informed Mr. CODY that she would be greatly pleased to have a visit from him, at the corner of Congress and Columbia streets. He thanked her for the invitation and promised to call, but discovering the theft shortly afterward he dispatched a detective to the point named. Of course, she was not there.

About 2 o'clock yesterday morning the house of Mr. E. H. EDEN, at the corner of Quincy-street and Tompkins-avenue, was entered by a burglar and robbed of a silver watch worth $40. Mr. EDEN got out of bed just in time to see the coat tail of the invader disappear from the second-story window.

The chemical factory of JACOB ELIAS, at the corner of Dupont and Oakland streets, was declared, yesterday, to be a nuisance by the Board of Health, and the proprietor required to show cause why it should not be removed.

JACOB KEYSER and ANDREW PLUMB were yesterday committed to await the action of the Grand Jury, by Justice EAMES, for committing a murderous assault upon FRED. HAUCK, of Graham-avenue, E. D., on the night of Aug. 23.

LONG ISLAND.

HALLOCK RAYNOR, at present confined in the Suffolk County Jail at Riverhead, awaiting trial on an indictment for highway robbery, in attacking and robbing PATRICK WALSH, attempted to escape from that institution a few nights since. It seems that the Sheriff had his attention called to a peculiar grating sound one night last week, and becoming satisfied that attempts was being made on the part of some one of the prisoners to escape, he arose from his bed and noiselessly examined the outside of the jail, which is a circular building of stone, about twenty-five feet in diameter. At length, becoming convinced that the noise came from the window of RAYNOR'S cell, he closely inspected it, and found that two of the bars of his cell were almost entirely sawed apart, and a third half sawed off. A number of fine spring saws were found on the person of the prisoner. In all probability the prisoner would have been free by morning if he had not been discovered. This is the third attempt he has made to escape—once by rushing by the court officers, and the other time by tunneling under the walls of the jail.

Yesterday morning, a young man named EDGERTON, of this City, stopping at Cypress, L. I., with his uncle, met his death under very painful circumstances. He was out gunning, and to reach a wood had to cross a fence. In doing this, the triggers caught in the rails, the cap snapped, and the charge exploded, the contents of both barrels entering his head, killing him instantly. He was found soon after by other sportsmen and conveyed to his home. Coroner SHARMAN will hold an inquest, after which the body will be brought to this City for burial. He was twenty years of age.

Yesterday the Suffolk County Court and Court of Special Sessions convened at the Court-house, Riverhead, Judge JOHN R. REID presiding, assisted by Justices WILLIAM H. MONTGOMERY and M. R. SMITH. The following criminal cases will be disposed of at this term: Charles Howe, indicted for libel; William Thornhill, burglary; John Tooley, rape; Violetta and Henry Walker, colored, grand larceny; Hallock Raynor, Clark Raynor and William Wines, highway robbery; Timothy Sullivan, assault with intent to kill, and 2d degree, 2d petit larceny. The Judge gave notice that the Court would hold three sessions daily until all the cases were disposed of.

New-Castle is the name of a new German settlement, which is expected soon to become a city, situated on the Long Island Railroad, between Westburg and Hicksville. Streets are being laid out, lots surveyed, and cottages started in large numbers.

The Queens County Democratic County Convention, for the nomination of county officers and the selection of sixteen delegates to the First District Congressional Convention will meet at the court-house, North Hempstead, on Tuesday, Oct. 4.

The Long Island railroads have consented to carry articles for exhibition at the Suffolk County Agricultural Fair, to be held at Riverhead on the 5th, 6th, and 7th of October to and from that place free of expense.

The first train over the New-York and Hampstead Plains Railroad ran from Hampstead to Valley Stream yesterday. The formal opening of the road will probably take place some time next week.

Within a few days a mortgage for $2,250,000 has been placed on file at the Suffolk County Clerk's office, Riverhead, on the South Side Railroad, to secure the bondholders of that line. $2,250 worth of stamps were placed upon the instrument.

The schooner B. D. Pitts, of Riverhead, sailed from that place last week for New-York, reaching the latter place in twenty-four hours, a distance of nearly 175 miles.

STATEN ISLAND.

Two men, suspected of being New-York thieves, were stopped at the Stapleton Ferry, last night by Officer HEMMERY, when they made an assault on him, and would have badly beaten him, but that Officers ROMER and ROX came to the rescue and arrested the parties, who gave the names of PHILIP JORDAN and PETER BOSNETZ.

JOHN KINKLER and CHAS. UNGER quarreled over some matter of business yesterday, when both parties became very much excited and UNGER drew a revolver, which he presented at KINZLER and threatened to shoot him. UNGER was arrested, and committed by Judge GARRETT in the sum of $1,000.

Mr. HENRY HUGHES, an old resident of New-Brighton, doing business in New-York, was yesterday run over by a runaway and badly injured about the head and face. He was taken to his home in a bad state.

NEW-JERSEY.

Some time since, through the influence of Representative CLEVELAND, a number of condemned cannon were voted to Jersey City for use in building a proposed soldiers' monument on Van Voorst square. The authorities have thus far neglected to secure the gift, and are now likely to have trouble in doing so. There was only a small number of condemned cannon, and, as several requests having been made for them after the allotments, it is proposed to give to these new claimants such pieces as have been thus far left unclaimed by the parties to whom they were given. In this case, Jersey City will lose her share.

Yesterday, about noon, while a gentleman named CARE and his son were fishing off the Elysian Fields, Hoboken, with Mr. JNO. ALLERS, the boat was struck by the swell of a passing steamer and upset. All the men were thrown into the water, and ALLERS was drowned. His body was recovered by a young man, JNO. EWINS, in the employ of Mr. BRADY, on the river, and viewed by Coroner CRANE, when it was taken to his home. Mr. ALLERS was a well-known citizen, about forty years of age, doing business with the firm of FINK & ALLERS, coal dealers, No. 224 Sorden-street. An inquest will be held today.

A man named JAMES KELLY, from Bristol, Pedn., induced a young girl, named ANNA CANN, also a resident of that place, to accompany him to Trenton on Sunday, with the avowed intention of marrying her, which he failed to do. They went to a hotel on Bridge-street, where he represented her as his wife, and took a room. Yesterday the girl's friends went to Trenton and procured the arrest of KELLY, who is a married man, but whose wife is married to another man. The girl returned home from Trenton about 3 o'clock in the morning and arrested. Miss CANN is only eighteen years of age, and respectably connected.

The President of the Central Railroad of New-Jersey has given a lot to the Presbyterians of Dunnellen, as the site for a new church. The Presbyterians of the vicinity have organized themselves into a society, and propose building a small but handsome church. They also have the promise of a money subscription from the Company.

The Dutch Reformed Church at New Brunswick has laid the foundations for a new Sunday-school and lecture-room building. The corner-stone of the new building is to be laid to-morrow.

The Middlesex County Bible Society will celebrate its twenty-first anniversary today. The Society meet in the Presbyterian Church at Perth Amboy at 10½. The annual sermon will be by Rev. J. S. PLUMLEY, of Helvetia.

The new buildings at Princeton College are rapidly approaching completion. Prof. WELLING, formerly editor of the National Intelligencer, graduated in 1826 in Princeton, has taken the place of Prof. MCILVAINE as professor of Belles Letters and Rhetoric. Dr. MCILVAINE has removed to Newark and accepted of a pastorate.

Last night the German citizens of Camden held a celebration in honor of the late victories. An immense meeting was held at the foot of Cooper-street, and a large collection was taken for the benefit of the wounded soldiers.

The clothes of the man whose body was found in the water near the German steamers, at Hoboken, last week, have been recognized as those of FRANCIS BOLT, of No. 227 West Forty-fourth-street, New-York, who has been missing from his home for some time. The body will be disinterred.

Out of the 575 prisoners now confined in the State Prison in New-Jersey only twenty-six are females. Two thousand pairs of shoes are daily turned out by 370 prison operatives. The September and October terms of Court will probably swell the number of convicts to nearly 700.

ANDREW HAZEL was yesterday arrested in Orange-street, Newark, charged with having stolen a horse in July, the property of ALLEN MCDONALD, of Jersey City. The theft occurred on the line of the canal, west of the city, and since the occurrence, HAZEL has succeeded in evading the officers of the law till now.

At the Court of Special Sessions in Jersey City, yesterday, Judge RANDOLPH presiding, a number of cases of little importance were tried. A number of persons were found guilty and remanded for sentence. JOHN BYRNES and JOHN SULLIVAN, held for an attempted burglary at Hoboken, were discharged.

On Saturday last HENRY M. BREEZE, late of Newark, where he learned the trade of harness-maker of H. N. PETERS, committed suicide in a trunk-factory on Forty-first-street, where he was employed as a foreman. He left a letter for his wife, but gave no reason for committing the act.

A new and beautiful building is being erected in Newark, 200 feet square, five stories high and entirely of iron, to be used as a convent, and to be called St. James' Convent, St. James' Church in Newark furnishing the funds for its erection. Rev. Father GERVIUS, as pastor of the church, superintends the whole work.

HENRY GOOD was yesterday brought before Judge MARTINDALE, of Jersey City, and held for trial on a charge of attempt to defraud passengers at the Erie Railway depot. He had enticed a man away from the depot and tried to get money from him under false pretenses. A negro was arrested on the same charge, but discharged.

The defaulting freight agent, VALENTINE, who left his home in Paterson some time ago, and who was subsequently proved to have stolen a considerable amount from the Erie Railway Company, has been arrested and is now lodged in the Paterson jail. He was caught in Ohio.
